CAYER BILLED FOR TRIP

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says Marc Cayer, a prisoner of the North Vietnamese for five years, has been billed $1,275 by the federal government which returned him to Canada from Hanoi earlier this year.

The newspaper says a copy of the bill, sent to Mr. Cayer by the external affairs department, has been made available to it.

Items for which the 30-year agronomist from St. Raymond, Que., is being charged The Star says, include air travel, cost of meals in Hanoi and Saigon, $32.54 for the suit, tie and socks given him to replace his prison clothes.

The Star says a letter was sent Mr. Cayer on May 1 asking him to settle the April 5 bill as soon as possible so department accounts could be made up to date.

Mitchell Sharp, external affairs minister, told the Commons Feb. 12 that Mr. Cayer's travel expenses would be covered by the government. The same arrangement would apply for Lloyd Oppel, a 21-year-old missionary from Courtenay, B.C., also a prisoner of the North Vietnamese.

Oppel was taken to the United States in a U.S. aircraft and then transported home by a Canadian Armed Forces aircraft. The Star quotes Oppel in an interview Tuesday as saying he has received no bill from the Canadian government.

Cayer flew from Hanoi to Saigon aboard an International Commission of Control and Supervision aircraft and from Saigon to Chicago on commercial flights. He travelled from Chicago to Quebec City in a federal government jet.

U.K. Cabinet Sex Scandal

Times News Services

Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath has called an emergency meeting of his top advisers to investigate reports of a vice scandal in his cabinet.

Scotland Yard is pressing a full investigation and informed sources said MI-5, the government counter-espionage agency, has been ordered to check whether national security has been compromised through brothel assiggations following the resignation of a junior minister in Heath's cabinet Tuesday.

It is exactly 10 years since the Profumo sex scandal shook the British government.

Junior cabinet minister Lord Lambton, who was under-secretary of defence for the RAF, today admitted to "a casual acquaintance with a call girl" but denied newspaper reports that national security is imperilled by the involvement of high-ranking officials in an international vice ring.

"There has been no high-life vice ring, no security leak, no blackmail; and so far as I know, no politician from any party is remotely concerned with these events."

Within hours the office of Attorney General Sir Peter Rawlinson announced that summonses alleging illegal possession of dangerous drugs have been issued against Lambton. It said he is being charged with possession of marijuana and amphetamines.

The Evening Standard of London said special agents for three weeks have been investigating sensational allegations "about vice ring improprieties involving government ministers and other figures." It said at least one other government minister was involved.

ADMITS 'STUPIDITY'

The London Evening News said the girl was a black call girl named "Betty" and that a man calling himself her husband tried to sell "incriminating photographs" of the girl and Lambton to a British newspaper for $25,000.

The Daily Mirror says one source close to the top level of the government told it that Scotland Yard's file on the matter was "dynamite."

"I behaved with credulous stupidity," said Lambton, 50-year-old father of a son and five daughters, in a press statement.

"This is the sordid story," he said. "All that happened is that some sneak pimp has seen an opportunity of making money by the sale of the story and secret photographs to papers at home and abroad."

He said he has been told the husband of the call girl with whom he was acquainted secretly took some photographs and sold them to newspapers.

Another Conservative government was rocked 10 years ago by the disclosure that its war minister, John Profumo, and a Soviet military attache had slept with the same prostitute, Christine Keeler. No security leak was ever found, but Profumo's political career collapsed in disgrace because he lied to the House of Commons about his connection with Miss Keeler.

The government refused comment on the reports of the new scandal, but the allegations were splashed on front pages of newspapers.

HENDERSON HINTS SUBTERFUGE

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Some federal government departments are trying to circumvent the Commons in gaining funds, the latest report of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson hinted today.

The report, tabled in the Commons this afternoon, slams "circuitous" sales of CF-5 aircraft worth more than $34 million and suggests the purpose behind the sales to foreign governments was to buy new planes without Parliamentary approval of the necessary funds.

Henderson's report also points out that over-payments totalling $1,044,000 were made in old-age pensions last year and only little more than half of it has been recovered by the government.

It also shows:

—The CBC will have to absorb losses of $4,872,000 to March 31 last year unless that amount is offset by subsequent profits.

—The national defence department was reimbursed about $8.3 million for meals and rations to its members but issued another $8.8 million worth, an increase of $1 million over 1970-71.

This report, for the fiscal year ending March 31, is Henderson's last. He retired early in April.

Freeze For Prison

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said today no medium-security prisoners will be sent to William Head penitentiary until he has considered a petition from area residents. (See also Page 13)

Replying to a question from Allan McKinnon (Conservative-Victoria) in the Commons, Allmand said he would go ahead with plans to raise the prison's fence but promised to delay other action until he had heard suggestions for relocation of the prison from Metchosin and Albert Head residents.

"It looks as if there will be a freeze on the conversion," McKinnon told The Times today.

"He (Allmand) really has a devil of a problem," McKinnon said, "he hasn't a single empty cell in Canada."

McKinnon said that Allmand has expressed interest in the suggestion by Metchosin residents that William Head be moved to Bentinck Island, just inside of Race Rocks.

Barrett Links Job, Pay Guarantees

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Premier Barrett today proposed development of a "dual strategy of guaranteed jobs and guaranteed incomes."

Barrett, in an opening statement prepared for the premiers' conference proposed a permanent community employment program, tied to a guaranteed income program, higher family allowances and higher pensions.

"We are deeply concerned about the problems we perceive in the present social security system, and believe there is an urgent need to develop effective solutions to these problems."

His proposed community employment program would provide jobs "based on the notion of socially profitable employment in the public sector."

"The government of British Columbia is convinced that we should work toward replacing the present system of social assistance with a guaranteed income plan providing universal access for those persons who lack sufficient resources for a reasonable standard of living."

Barrett proposed sweeping changes in the Canada Pension Plan "so that it will play a central role in Canada's social security system."

Over a three-year period the level of maximum pensionable earnings should be increased "close to $10,000," and the present two-per-cent limit should be removed so pensions can move freely with the consumer price index.

Full retirement benefits should be available at age 60 instead of 65, with a reduced pension available at 55.

COFFEE BREAK ROBBERY

CHAPAIS, Que. (CP) — Three armed and masked bandits escaped with $136,000 in cash today after holding up a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in this community, 310 miles north of Montreal.

No shots were fired and no one was injured.

Police said the bank manager and four employees were in a restaurant about 15 minutes before the bank was scheduled to open, when the men, armed with revolvers and machine guns, burst in and took a teller hostage.

One man remained in the restaurant with the teller while the other two herded the manager and three bank employees off to open the bank.

$1,000,000 On the Road

PEARISBURG, Va. (AP) — A bus collided with an armored truck during a heavy rainstorm near here today, killing the driver of the truck and strewing about $1 million over the highway, police said.

Williams Cracks At Davis

Williams attacked the federal minister for "not having the guts" to deal with the real pollution offenders in B.C., which he said are the multinational corporations based in the U.S.

The worst polluter in B.C., Williams said, is the Rayonier plant at Port Alice, owned by the giant American ITT Corporation.

Williams also said the provincial government had to go it alone in moving to support the economy of the northwestern sector of the province through its purchase of Columbia Cellulose operations in Prince Rupert and the Crown Zellerbach plant at Ocean Falls.

Similar projects in other provinces have been financed by the federal government through the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, Williams said, adding that B.C. was not able to get any money whatsoever from DREE for its takeovers.

Instead, Williams said, Davis has exhibited "political gamesmanship" in his comments about the B.C. mills.

"He's always trying to get a few Brownie points in a penny-ante political game instead of attempting to cooperate with the provincial government," Williams said.

Close Camps, Parks Urged

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Pressure is being exerted on the provincial parks department to close down its campsites because of rowdyism and vandalism, parks director Robert Ahrens said today.

"People have requested that we turn over our campsite system to private operators," he said.

I'm against this because it would be a hell of a thing to do—leasing out our campsites to private individuals."

Ahrens said turning over provincial campsites to individuals or companies would be giving "private enterprise a foothold in our parks."

He was commenting on the disturbance in Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach on the Victoria Day weekend and the vandalism in provincial parks during Easter.

He said cost to repair damage caused by vandals in three parks—Goldstream, Bamberton and Mowat Parks—over Easter was $7,000.

"That is only for three parks," he said. "I haven't got the bills for damages to other parks on the island and the mainland."

He said he had a request Tuesday to phase out the campsite at Mowat Park near Ganges on Saltspring Island, and to turn it into a day park.

"I agree with that," he said. "It should be a day park for the local residents."

He said other people have requested we put fences around our campsites to keep out undesirable elements.

"I am opposed to this," he said. "The only answer to vandalism and hooliganism is to impose more stringent park restrictions. This means that a park warden would have the authority to refuse any person whom he thought is undesirable.

"It is not a thing we like to do," he added, "but legitimate campers have to be protected from hooligans."

Ahrens said the trouble in parks is caused by minority groups.

For the most part they are unmotivated young men," he said. "They don't know what to in their spare time, except drive cars, drink and draw attention to themselves."

John Willow, a member of the B.C. Sierra Club conservation committee, said the general public is partly to blame for increased vandalism.

"We are inclined to treat the teaching of recreational skills as a frill," he said. "In Britain and other European countries, recreational skills are considered as important as education."

"The problem of vandalism isn't going to get any better until we take a hard look at our educational system," he added. "There is a lot of educational work to be done in teaching people how to treat

Westcoast Wants Gas Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. is applying to the National Energy Board for an increase in the domestic rate charged to natural gas utilities in British Columbia.

Kelly Gibson, chairman of the Westcoast board, said at a news conference today that an increase in the rate base and rate of return was needed to meet increased cost of natural gas from the producers and recent tax legislation introduced by the B.C. government.

Gibson said the application represents the first domestic price increase sought by the company in its 16-year history.

"Westcoast has maintained prices at stable and moderate levels for 16 years," he said. "The provincial government is making it impossible to do so any longer.

"The only course open to us is to seek compensation for increased costs over which we have no control."

Gibson said the company was hit recently with a rise of eight cents per thousand cubic feet in the price of gas purchased from the Fort St. John fields.

He said this meant an increase of more than 25 per cent in the average field price paid by Westcoast and added $13 million a year to the cost of the company's gas supply.

KUWAIT PLACES BIG ARMS ORDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The tiny shiekdom of Kuwait is about to order more than $500 million worth of U.S. tanks, planes, missiles and military construction assistance as the arms race in the oil-rich Persian Gulf continues to expand.

Final arrangements between U.S. and Kuwaiti officials on the arms deal are expected to be made within the next few days.

The sale comes on the heels of about $2.5 billion in U.S. arms sales to Iran over the past 18 months; a $625 million British deal to help Saudi Arabia maintain its air defences; and continuing Soviet shipments of arms to Iraq, which has been feuding with both Kuwait and Iran.

'Doing Something for President'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — An ex-White House staffer testified today he felt he was "doing something for the president" when he relayed offers of executive clemency to Watergate conspirator James McCord and that he believed President Nixon knew he was making such offers.

Nixon, meanwhile, disclosed for the first time Tuesday he had ordered his two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, to limit the Watergate investigation.

He said he did it to protect highly sensitive "national security operations" being conducted by the CIA and the White House and not to impede bringing wrong-doers to justice. He denied making, or authorizing anybody to make, clemency offers.

But he conceded that some of his aides probably went beyond his directives and attempted to hide illegal activities which they and others had undertaken on his behalf.

John Caulfield, testifying for a second day at the Senate Watergate hearings, said he knew his actions were wrong but that his "loyalty to the President of the United States overrode these considerations."

Caulfield emphasized that he had "no direct knowledge" that Nixon was aware he relayed offers of clemency to McCord at three meetings last January while McCord was on trial for the bugging of Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Caulfield said he had been asked to relay the clemency promises to his old friend McCord by then-White House counsel John Dean, who he said told him to tell McCord the offers were sincere and came from "the highest levels" of the White House.

Caulfield said he believed Dean was acting with proper authority — which could only come fron Nixon himself.

The former White House aide said Dean's request plunged him into a deep personal conflict between loyalty to the White House and having to do what he knew was wrong — a criminal act to obstruct justice.

"I know when wrongdoing is occurring," he said. "I knew that (using) executive clemency in this manner was wrong."

Caulfield said that because Dean was involved in the clemency offers, he "assumed there were others in the White House" involved as well, including "conceivably, very conceivably, quite possibly" presidential adviser Ehrlichman.

He said he called Ehrlichman on June 17 — the day McCord and four other men were arrested at the Watergate — after being alerted to the arrests by the secret service, and told him: "John, there sounds like there is a disaster of some type."

He said Ehrlichman told him: "I guess I had better place a call to John Mitchell," the former attorney-general who has Nixon's campaign manager at the time.

McCord has testified he was told Mitchell helped to plan the Watergate bugging. Mitchell has denied the allegations, but has told a grand jury he sat in on three meetings where bugging plans were discussed.

Nixon, declaring he will not resign, issued two statements Tuesday disclaiming any knowledge of, or participation in, illegal activities.

While conceding he is under heavy fire, Nixon said: "I will not abandon my responsibilities. I will continue to do the job I was elected to do."

The longer of the two presidential statements sought to deal, point by point, with much of the testimony and other disclosures widely deemed to be potentially most damaging to the chief executive.

In a 4,000-word defence of his conduct, Nixon argued repeatedly that "grossly misleading impressions" concerning his role can be explained by his concern for protecting national-security interests.

"In citing these national-security matters, it is not my intention to place a national-security 'cover' on Watergate," he said, "but rather to separate them out from Watergate. . . ."

He said this is necessary because "sensitive documents are now threatened with disclosure."

In a series of denials, Nixon also said:

He had no prior knowledge of the Watergate burglary;

He knew nothing about a coverup;

He was unaware that his former personal lawyer Herbert Kalmbach, raised money for the defendants;

He never attempted to implicate CIA in the scandal, and did not know until recently about the burglary in the Daniel Ellsberg case.

Nixon said the statement was based on his own recollections of what he did and said during the months since the June 17 break-in of the National Democratic headquarters and he promised additional responses when further questions are raised.

Presidential counsel Leonard Garment Tuesday explained the differences between Nixon's latest Watergate statements and earlier ones by saying the president now has "a clearer recollection" of the events surrounding the burglary.

Garment was one of three presidential surrogates who took turns explaining Nixon's statement, at a stormy White House briefing in which reporters frequently drowned out the answers while Garment pleaded for "fairness" for deposed White House aides.

In a television speech on April 30, the president described how he had discounted press stories about Watergate throughout the election campaign and until March 21 of this year, "because I believed the reports I was getting, because I had faith in the persons from whom I was getting them."

But in his statement Tuesday, it appeared that the president had indicated doubts about the official version of the case as early as a few days after the break-in, when he said he had incorrectly suspected involvement by the Central Intelligence Agency.

Nixon said he had been "advised that there was a possibility of CIA involvement in some way," but neither Garment nor White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler were able to say who it was that advised him.

The Washington Star-News, which endorsed Nixon's candidacy in 1968 and 1972, said Nixon's statement "raises so many questions and provides so few credible answers that we are sure that he will soon once again find time from his 'larger duties' to inform our doubts and dispel our fears."

In other developments:

—The Central Intelligence Agency said today it acted within its authority in administering lie detector tests to three state department officials in July, 1971, after FBI director J. Edgar Hoover refused to let the FBI do so.

—President Jose Figueres of Costa Rica said Tuesday night he was not guilty of any wrongdoing in his relationship with financier Robert Vesco, under indictment in New York. Figueres made the speech after allegations that Vesco-owned companies placed more than $300,000 in Figueres' bank account in New York.

—Former special presidential counsel Charles Colson and two of his law partners made plans last month to place an attorney in a key position at the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) to assist the law firm in representing its clients, according to an internal law firm memorandum quoted in the Washington Post.

and enjoy our natural environment."

Willow agreed with national park officials that all cars should be banned on Long Beach.

Park superintendent Reg Joscelyn said the banning of cars on the beach and prohibition of camping on the beach may be enforced next year.

He said this is being considered in order to curb hooliganism.

"The prohibition of beach camping might come next year," he said, if a 1,200-unit campsite at the Tofino end of the beach being built by a private developer was ready for use next year.

The federal government should not wait for private developers to establish campsites for visitors, Ucluelet Mayor Bob Russell said.

"It is about time they started spending money on this park," he said. "I would like to know what money the government is spending on parks in eastern Canada. They are certainly not doing very much here."

Joscelyn said the Victoria Day and Easter weekends were the worst for vandalism.

More than 300 persons took part in a disturbance at Long Beach Sunday night and 11 men were arrested following a clash with RCMP and park wardens.

Charged with causing a disturbance were Reginald Cooks, 20, and Brian Crosson, 21. All are from Port Alberni.

In addition, more than 70 persons were charged under the Motor Vehicle Act. Charges ranged from driving without due care and attention and speeding.

Campsites operated by forest companies were free of rowdyism over the weekend.

Renfrew logging division manager Ken Halberg of B.C. Forest Products said there have been isolated incidents in the company's campsites in the San Juan River Valley.

He admitted the company has no resources to handle trouble in its 120 campsites located at Fairy Lake.

"About all we could do if a gang like that turned up would be to call police," he said, referring to the Long Beach incident last weekend.

But, he added, the Sooke RCMP, which has Jordan River and Port Renfrew responsibility, is 55 miles away.

would provide equal treatment for male and female contributors, with the cost offset by increased contributions from the earning spouse.

Changes to the pension plan, said Barrett, need not wait for the over-all review of the social security system.

He said he would make a statement later on the federal government's proposals for financing health care.

Prime Minister Trudeau today called on provincial premiers to join him in seeking greater "harmonization of goals of both levels of government."

"Canadians have the implicit right to require a harmonization of federal and provincial goals in order to obtain the most rational, integrated and efficient public services — to get the most for their money," he said.

Ontario's William Davis called for a fresh assessment of the federal system, saying confederation and the nation's well-being are at stake unless the province and Ottawa can agree to a new national consensus.

Davis' plea was a tough reiteration of Ontario's basic position that the provinces require more federal revenue to cope with mounting provincial and municipal demands.

There must be acceptance of the principle of division of powers so the public will understand which level of government is accountable, he said.

He reiterated Ontario's support for Quebec's proposal to end cost-sharing in exchange for a larger share of federal personal income tax revenue.

Any approach, however, which changes federal health care contributions to revenue sharing on tax points will not contribute to a strong and united Canada, Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan said.

The basis of the three-day meeting should be on the provision of equality of economic opportunity in every region of Canada. Solutions to problems require innovative action, determination and boldness, he said.

The federal government must maintain sufficient legislative and fiscal power to be the monitor of the national well-being, he added.

It must exert the initiatives necessary to direct the economy, counter disruptive regional trends and intervene boldly in the market place to achieve balanced regional development.

An Uneventful Birth for RCMP

OTTAWA (CP) — One hundred years ago today the Earl of Dufferin, Governor-General of Canada, gave royal assent to 104 pieces of legislation.

The 91st bill read to him was "An Act Respecting the Administration of Justice and for the Establishment of a Police Force in the Northwest Territories."

With little fanfare and no controversy what was to become known as the Northwest Mounted Police —and later the Royal Canadian Mounted Police—was on its way to international renown, the subject of legend.

The bill was a proclamatory one, to become law when the government chose. Prime Minister John A. Macdonald proclaimed it Aug. 30, 1873, and recruitment for the new force started almost immediately.

Commons debates were not printed in 1873, only a few years after Confederation, so a record of the thoughts of MPs about the para-military force aren't availble.

There is no mention of any debate on the bill in the records of the Senate of that year But historians say there was no controversy and the legislation went through the House without trouble.

Creation of the force was recommended by military officers who had been sent west to report on lawlessness and disorder. Historians record that illicit liquor traffickers swarmed across the border from the United States bringing demoralization to whites and Indians alike.

The Conservative legislation provided for a force of not more than 300 able-bodied men.

"No person shall be appointed to the Police Force unless he be of a sound constitution, able to ride, active and able-bodied, of good character and between the ages of 18 and 40 years, nor unless he be able to read and write either the English or French language," the bill said.

The duties of the police were preservation of the peace, prevention of crime, apprehension of criminals and offenders, escorting convicts and "other prisoners or lunatics" to courts.

The legislation provided for loss of up to 30 days pay for those who broke regulations. These fines were to go into a fund for the payment of "such rewards for good conduct or meritous services as may be established."

Constables were to receive $1 a day and sub-constables 75 cents. The commissioner of the force would get between $2,000 and $2,600 a year and a superintendent between $1,000 and $1,400.

The government wanted the force to stop the liquor traffic gain the respect and confidence of the Indians and break them of their old practices with tact and patience, collect customs duties—and perform all the duties of a police force.

To do all this the government decided on a force of 150 men for a start and these men were rapidly recruited and sent to Fort Garry, near Winnipeg.

BIRTHDAY PAY HIKES

OTTAWA (CP) — General pay increases and overtime pay reductions for regular members of the RCMP celebrating its 100th birthday this year, were announced today by the solicitor-general's department.

Salaries for first-class constables will rise to $12,300 from the present $11,550, for corporals to $13,376 from $12,700, for sergeants to $14,575 from $13,860, for inspectors to $19,412 from $18,400 and for superintendents to $22,365 from $21,300.

But the announcement also includes downward adjustments in overtime pay to $300 from $450 a year for junior officer ranks and to $800 from $900 for members below officer ranks.

The decreases are said to be due to reductions in amounts of overtime reported.

No-Profit Senior Housing Approved

St. John's Anglican Church has approved development of a non-profit, non-denominational senior citizens' housing project to replace its parish hall.

At a meeting Tuesday night church members voted to go ahead with plans for a 32-unit, three-storey apartment dwelling which will operate on a "life estate" plan.

The plan, church member John Ozard explained today, means senior citizens will actually purchase their suites but when they die the suites revert to the church.

In fact the senior citizens will only pay a monthly charge since the provincial government's $1,000 home acquisition grant will form the down payment. Because they will own their accommodation the residents will also be entitled to yearly hmeowner grants—which will help with monthly payments.

The $600,000 develoment, which still must receive zoning approval from city council, will be built on the corner of Balmoral and Mason, where the church parish hall and verger's residence now stand.

A garden courtyard will be built between the church and the apartment and all suites will face onto the courtyard.

Ozard said besides 32 one-bedroom suites the building will house a church office and a hall which will double as a meeting place for residences and church functions.

The development will, however, be non-denominational and Ozard says will serve "middle-income" senior citizens.

Top Kissinger Aide On Saigon Mission

Times News Services

PARIS — Henry Kissinger's top aide flew to Saigon Tuesday night amid indications that problems requiring concessions from South Vietnamese president Nugyen Van Thieu have cropped up in the talks on strengthening the Vietnam ceasefire.

Kissinger met for the sixth time today with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho and said he probably will return to Washington this evening.

For unexplained reasons, the U.S. embassy declined to confirm or deny William Sullivan's departure aboard a U.S. air force jet for more than two hours.

In Saigon, meanwhile, Polish and Hungarian delegates to the international truce force put forward proposals today which, if accepted, would paralyse the already - weakened commission.

Canadian Ambassador Michel Gauvin later dscribed the move as "completely intolerable."

The Hungarians demanded that three reports containing interviews with alleged North Vietnamese prisoners held by the South Vietnamese be struck from the agenda for Monday's regular meeting of the ICCS.

The Hungarians, supported by the Poles, contended that the reports were based mainly on interviews conducted only by the Canadian and Indonesian delegates to the four-country commission.

At issue is the question of whether any investigation can be carried out without the consent of all four parties and a formal report presented to the two-party Joint Military Commission.

ROCKATHON WON TWICE IN ROW

Reiter, 435 Lampson, won $100 and a trophy shortly after 4 this morning.

He rocked 61 hours and 24 minutes, short of the 73 hours, 55 minutes he rocked in last year's competition.

The event is sponsored by the Victoria Days Society.

Second place winner Pat Bulmer, 21, 607 Linden Avenue stopped rocking early this morning after 61 hours 13 minutes. He won second prize of $75.

Third prize of $25 went to Stephen Taylor, 17, 836 Darwin Avenue. He dropped out at 11:20 p.m. Tuesday after rocking for 57 hours and 10 minutes.

APPLE-DUMPING THREAT

Fruit growers will be forced to unload 500,000 boxes of apples this summer without going through "regular chansels" if a fruit marketing commission is not established through legislation, Agriculture Minister David Stupich was told today.

A breakaway group of Okanagan tree fruit growers met Stupich to seek a provincial fruit marketing commission to control distribution of fruit products to markets inside and outside British Columbia.

The United Fruit Growers of B.C., formed six weeks ago as a splinter from the B.C. Fruit Growers Association, has about 100 members controlling 2,000 acres of growing area and one million boxes of fruit annually.

The group's president, Hans Rhenisch, said if a fruit marketing commission is not established through legislation, growers in the new group will have to unload 500,000 boxes of apples outside "regular channels."

Such an action would be illegal and detrimental to the fruit growing industry as a whole, he said, but would be necessary.

Rhenisch said the main problem with the fruit industry in the province is that the "middle man," who processes the growers product through to the market, is getting too much of a profit, and not enough return is coming back to the grower himself.

He said the total tonnage of fruit grown in the province has dropped to four million boxes per year from six million boxes 10 years previously. Return to the producer has dropped from 5½ cents per pound to between 3½ and 4 cents, he said.

Rhenisch said the United Fruit Growers are not prepared to continue to take such large losses for production of their crops. "We would be out of business in one more year," he said. "We're not prepared to go out of business because of poor marketing practices."

The fruit growers proposal is to replace the existing B.C. Fruit Board with a fruit marketing commission consisting of representatives of government, wholesale and retail trade, consumers, manufacturing and packing industries, producers, bankers and unions. A professional manager should also be used to administer the commission.

Rhenisch and two other representatives of the new group, secretary Barry Irwin and director Lyle Dawson, hope to make a presentation to the legislature's standing committee on agriculture within the next few weeks.

The group believes that recent requests from the B.C. Fruit Growers Association for provincial government help "is like asking for a bandaid to cure a chronic disease."

The group recommends "reasonable and enforced anti-dumping legislation rather than tariff protection" along with its request for a fruit marketing commission.

Rhenisch said if the existing B.C. Fruit Board attempts to prohibit growers from selling their products on roadside stands on their own property, "I believe there would be a riot." What is needed is an over-all body to regulate production and distribution of fruit products in the province, he said.

Guard Jobs on Line Over Jail Escapes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Penitentiary guards will be suspended if a prisoner escapes while in their custody during temporary leave, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Tuesday.

"I have issued instructions that there be no more ... temporary absences with escort unless the escort understands the prisoner is not to be out of sight during any time he is under escort," he told Eldon Wolliams (CP — Calgary North).

The penitentiaries service, embarrassed recently by an epidemic of escapes, has tightened up on temporary absences for prisoners, a spokesman for Allmand's office confirmed later.

In the Commons, the solicitor-general mentioned that several escapes occurred when prisoners visiting parents and hospitals were allowed out of sight of their guards.

In Vancouver, a union spokesman said more armed guards are needed on the perimeter of the British Columbia penitentiary and guards inside at the auditorium and exercise yard should be removed to lessen their chances of being taken hostage.

Al Hadvick, president of the B.C. Pen union local representing 280 men, made the recommendation to prison director Richard Graves at a regular monthly meeting.

The Saturday escape of bank robber John Emitte McCann, 25, was also discussed at the meeting.

Grates said security changes have been made at the prison but they could not be disclosed.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa Tuesday, penitentiaries commissioner Paul Faguy said that inmates have become tougher as security has tightened.

He called the B.C. Pen "the worst one we've got" and cited its outdated structure and limitations which complicate inprovements in security.

Additional pressures among prisoners have created fears that guards may be taken hostage and added, "we have taken measures to prevent it," Faguy said.

"We have made it clear that we are not going to make deals if hostages are used."

In Quebec, 18 of 34 penitentiary prisoners who have escaped custody since the beginning of the year are still at large.

Included in that number are convicted murderer Jean-Paul Mercier and Gilles Gingras, who both escaped May 13 from the maximum security Correctional Development Centre in nearby Laval.

Since the end of March, 18 prisoners from the medium-security Cowansville prison, 40 miles east of Montreal, have escaped or failed to return from leaves. Ten remain at large.

Boat Riddle Solved

A search was started when the boat was found with no sign of her occupants but with groceries scattered in the area.

Today, James Young of Bellingham, Wash., phoned to say that he was towing the craft behind his fishboat two days ago when it swamped in heavy seas.

When this happened, he cut the pleasure boat free.

A Dangerous Vacuum

President Nixon freed himself from the quicksand of Southeast Asia only to stumble into the mudhole of Washington. His explanations and denials in regard to the latter predicament, while addressed to his nation yesterday, were in a sense also directed to the whole world. For Mr. Nixon is not only the political leader of the United States and its head of state, he is also the head of the leading nation of the free world, the governor of the globe's greatest industrial and military power, and a key figure in a dozen pending international situations which will vitally affect millions of the earth's inhabitants.

His broadcast address was therefore of importance to peoples far beyond the bounds of his own country. It is unfortunate that he delayed his revelatory speech so long that he had more the appearance of a man who feared being smoked out, than of one who hurried to prove his innocence of error at the first opportunity.

It is even more unfortunate that the disclosures of recent weeks have brought the whole White House political structure into such disrepute that a large portion of Mr. Nixon's hearers, both at home and abroad, must have heard him with disbelief. That is a tragic situation for him, for his office, his country and the world.

The President's explanation that he wanted to restrict investigation into the participation of the FBI and the CIA in the Watergate affair only on the grounds that national security matters might also be revealed, comes less as a reassurance than as a hint of constant behind-the-scenes activities by these two organizations with many American citizens as targets.

Coupled with the obvious existence of ruthless men in charge of the nation's affairs — the men who have surrounded Mr. Nixon as his trusted advisers, closest friends and most influential associates — the recent disclosures of frequent wiretaps on government officials, newspaper reporters and other individuals; of medical and other files rifled; of important or incriminating papers burned; of lies and deceit in high places; of all sorts of activities which Mr. Nixon himself describes as "unethical as well as illegal," build up a sorry picture of a national capital in shambles.

Many Americans now recognize that the problem has gone far beyond the limits of political party jousting; it is the office of the presidency which now must be protected, rather than the incumbent, for it is the office which is permanent and which carries the prestige of the nation in its dealings with its people and with other national governments. As near friends and neighbors, Canadians will hope that the wound of Washington will be soon healed. A moral and political vacuum in that capital presents too great a danger to everyone.

"... Mr. Mayor ... remember you vetoed that bridge from James Bay to Vic West ... because of the heavy cost ...? ... well, I know of this bridge in New York that's for sale, and ..."

A Question Awaiting Cooler Weather

Members of Parliament have been assured a free vote on extension for another five years of the conditional ban on capital punishment, but the opinions of the leaders of the three major parties, Prime Minister Trudeau, Robert Stanfield and David Lewis, have been clearly defined. None of them wants a return to the law as it stood before the five-year experimental suspension was passed.

In some quarters the leaders' statements will be viewed as a counteracting force to a growing sentiment for return of the death penalty. Delaying a direct vote on the issue — the bill calls for an extension of the trial period — may soften increasing public resentment against what many people consider too lenient treatment of the offender.

That hardening attitude has been clearly indicated in the United States where 13 states have passed legislation to restore capital punishment following last June's decision by the U.S. Supreme Court that executions, as the policy was being carried out in that nation, were unconstitutional.

An international survey conducted recently by The Christian Science Monitor suggests that capital punishment is losing support throughout the world, but the trend to abolition is slow.

France and Spain both have laws permitting the death penalty for various crimes, though steady trends away from it have been reported in each country. Latin America generally follows a similar movement, although Argentina recently reinstated capital punishment as the result of a wave of terrorism and kidnapping. Italy and West Germany have abandoned the death penalty, and so, in practice, has Britain, where treason, piracy and some military crimes are still capital offences.

In East Europe a number of countries keep capital punishment on the books but invoke it rarely. Russia prescribes punishment by shooting as an "extraordinary penalty that may be applied pending its abolition."

Australia retains the death sentence legally in a number of states. Arab states and Iran prescribe the punishment for a variety of crimes — in the case of Iran more than 100 narcotics agents and pushers have been shot in the last three years. And in China, where the law is retained, instances of its use are said to be rare.

Japan lists execution as the penalty for a number of crimes, but the crime rate is reportedly low and capital punishment is not an issue. South Africa, on the other hand, accounts for about 50 per cent of non-Communist country executions each year, according to the survey.

Against this background Canadian parliamentary leaders who support abolition, understandably approve a bill that would carry the country's test period over another five years. By 1978 judgments may be formed in an era of less turbulence, though opinions on this question of conscience will no doubt still be swayed by emotion.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Hang on for the Golden Age

If perchance the reader experiences moments of doubt and pessimism, let him understand at once that he has been living, since 1945, in an era "by far the most brilliant in all the world's history." And if he lives until the 1990s he will see "the world's golden age."

That news comes, like an exhilarating spring tonic, from no less an authority than The Economist of London, possibly the most authoritative publication in the English language. Its deputy editor, N. A. D. Macrae, has written a long and brilliant series of articles to demonstrate that, with the single exception of Britain, all the advanced nations are doing fine, and will soon do better.

In only 28 years they have trebled the world's living standard and "added as much to daily production in this tiny instant of time as had been added in all the previous aeons of humankind." What more could anyone ask?

Want Happiness

Yet some wretched ingrates, even in Canada, ask a lot more than the statistics of happiness. They have the nerve to ask for happiness itself and somehow fail to find it in their standard of living because, regrettably, they don't happen to be economists, only human beings. It is not too late, however, to reform them. They have merely to read The Economist and realize how contented and fortunate they really are. The figures prove it, no matter what they may think in their ignorance.

To be sure, a few spots of trouble still exist. The poor nations are getting poorer and more turbulent. Some six million Africans are starving from drought. Probably half the world's inhabitants are illfed and soon will be eating less. The United States, the ideal of any sound economist, is using the lion's share of all available energy, intends to use much more and, if it has to ration gasoline and live in a cold house next winter, such small inconveniences will be overcome in a short time, say 20 years or so.

In fact, the only major nation with serious trouble is Britain, and its tragic failure shocks even the optimistic Mr. Macrae. As for the Commonwealth, he judges that the governments of former British colonies are "a nearly unmitigated disaster," and its conference in Ottawa this summer will be attended "by a steadily less democratic claque of one-party or no-party dictators," with "public executions as their latest spectator sport."

The Economist's plan to revolutionize and revitalize Britain is too long, complicated and radical for discussion here. Mr. Macrae thus sums it up: "The purpose of any commentator on British affairs today should be to fight his way out of the present creeping surrender to fantasy, back towards that proud Victorian submission to facts which was once our greatest British glory."

The facts, yes, but what are the world-wide facts? On one side of the ledger we find the assets of tripled production, the indices of the golden age. On the opposite side we find certain liabilities, such as unlivable cities, crime, drugs, political corruption, inflation and other familiar exhibits. But all these liabilities must seem comparatively minor, to the layman's non-economic mind, beside the fact that the planet is being gutted by mankind's demand upon its physical resources.

WILLY BRANDT
... avoid destruction

Take heart. The Economist has seen its way even through that fact. About a year ago, when the Club of Rome predicted that industrial civilization must collapse in depletion and pollution by the end of the century, The Economist, with an infallibility denied to the Pope, dismissed this warning as brilliant nonsense.

While there might be bottlenecks and shortages here and there, man would invent plenty of new resources, would synthesize abundant energy and distil food out of stone, if necessary. Science would solve all these problems. The Club of Rome's nonsense, however brilliant, could not obstruct the golden age.

As a rule The Economist sticks to economics and leaves philosophy to the philosophers but for once it indulges in some fascinating speculation, with the posthumous help of the great German philosopher, G. W. F. Hegel.

He held that in an existing system of ideas, the "thesis" invariably generates its opposite, the "antithesis," and the two merge to form a new "synthesis," which then repeats the same process. Precisely this, says The Economist, is happening to our present system, or culture.

The thesis of worldly materialism, the concept of man as a primarily economic animal, produced the antithesis of the "econuts" as The Economist calls them. They think that perhaps man is not entirely economic, that he may not find complete happiness in the golden age after all. But the synthesis now forming does not alarm The Economist. It trusts man to reject the econuts and their anti-materialism when he gets the facts through his head.

Midas Touch

If the new synthesis proves to be somewhat less materialistic than the old, it will still retain the sure Midas touch. Or, as Mr. Macrae puts it in an econutshell: America, Europe and Japan, during the next 15 years, will "please Samuel Johnson by recognizing again that there are few ways in which a people can be more innocently employed than in making money."

Dr. Johnson also believed in God, prayer, ghosts and other non-economic phenomena which The Economist forgets, and if it likewise has forgotten what happened to King Midas, with his golden touch, the chancellor of Germany has not. In a recent article Willy Brandt warned that economic man must "prevent productivity for the benefit of civilization from turning into destruction of civilization."

Apparently Mr. Brandt does not find the Club of Rome and the econuts talking brilliant nonsense, but that commodity, unlike some others, is not scarce. The layman will get all he needs, and even more brilliantly colored, in The Economist.

C. L. SULZBERGER

Business Before Ideology

PARIS — Perhaps the outstanding aspect of next month's Nixon-Brezhnev colloquy may be the normalization and expansion of trade contracts between the United States and Russia. The word "normalization" takes precedence over "expansion" for two reasons.

First of all, American private business concerns have never discovered an easy way of working out massive deals with a Soviet system where every commercial organization is a branch of the monolithic government. Secondly, the U.S. market, which still predominantly feeds upon itself, has hitherto found few major items it desires to import and has felt handicapped by the principle of barter payments.

These habits are in the process of being slowly altered. American business has had various one-shot deals with the U.S.S.R. dating back to Lenin's time. Two generations later it became involved in more complex arrangements with Communist East Europe.

Sizable Market

But East-West trade has been more thoroughly tested by West European and Japanese concerns. Italian automobile manufacturers, French television and West German energy groups have successfully demonstrated during recent years that there does indeed exist a sizable Russian market for specific enterprises. That the U.S. at last realizes this couldn't be better demonstrated than by David Rockefeller's Chase Manhattan Bank opening a Moscow office.

Problems involved in adjusting a capitalistic system to wholesale trade with a state-controlled economy have now been studied in detail. Perhaps the most expert analyst is the American international lawyer, Samuel Pisar, whose book "Coexistence and Commerce" has made a serious impression. Without reference to ideological conflicts, he suggests the so-called capitalist and Communist systems may slowly be approaching common institutional structures.

If this is the case, it will help Nixon and Brezhnev to find ways of further elaborting ground rules for Russo-American commerce. What the Soviets primarily want is fertilizers, chemicals and computer technology. What they have to export on a mass basis is energy and raw materials.

The U.S.S.R. is way behind the U.S.A. on computers and agricultural methodology. The latter may be an Achilles heel for years because of the collective system's inadequate psychological incentives which seem to encourage a built-in lag.

Pisar has cleverly deduced that "joint marketing ventures are becoming increasingly popular." Having studied such arrangements between East European governments and West European and West European private companies are setting up production and distribution ventures in common, with mutual profit as the principal objective."

SIR CHRISTOPHER SOAMES
... vital policy areas

The Nixon-Brezhnev talks could develop in this field. West Europe's competitive position is weak since "Europe" as such doesn't yet exist although members of the Common Market have been trying to steal an individual march. Russia would prefer to deal on the immense contintinent-wide scope of America.

Sir Christopher Soames, responsible for the Market's external relations, acknowledged recently there are vital policy areas in which the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. can each act as a unit while "Europe" still lacks the capacity to decide and act as a whole.

One mechanism on which the U.S. can build East-West commercial deals is the much-discussed multi-national corporation, most of whose examples are American-based and controlled, with numerous branches abroad. These benefit from manoeuvrable concentrations of capital that can be shifted according to labor costs and marketing prospects.

Useful Approach

Pisar makes the point that "in recent years the Soviet Union has begun to multinationalize its activities in Western financial markets." This approach could be useful to the U.S. balance-of-payments problem because Russo-American exchange deals might relieve the need for dollar expenditures elsewhere.

Taking a hard-boiled view, he considers Communist economies especially safe for investment when the political climate is good. Capitalist enterprise starts from zero: There is no threat of nationalization or expropriation; there are guarantees of stability, law and order, and no strikes.

All this leads to the speculative conclusion that should the Nixon and Brezhnev dialogue lead somewhere, we may eventually see multi-national capitalist economies and monolithic Communist state-controlled economies in marriages of convenience — becoming trans-ideological joint undertakings.

Editorial Correspondence

British

While we, here in Canada, are stampeding to erase as quickly as possible all things British, it is interesting to read the articles by James Reston and C. L. Sulzberger on the subject of the Watergate case.

Reston says, "The British put the limitations of political skulduggery more simply: "It simply isn't done;" and Sulzberger says, "Only one leading democracy, Britian, has remained comparatively unspotted." The Profumo Affair, which Sulzberger mentions, was not a money or political scandal but as he says, "because a junior minister lied to the House of Commons."

Perhaps we are in too much hurry to condemn and cast off all things British. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar Ave.

No Cliche

If indeed Mr. R. F. Smith wrote the very critical letter re my views on socialism and communism in the Victoria Times, May 16, I seemed to have touched him on a very raw nerve.

The list of countries supplied by Mr. Smith taken over by communism is surely confirmation and justification for the alarm I feel about the socialist disease. I certainly think socialism has weakened many countries which then fell prey to communism. Karl Marx started out innocently enough as a socialist, but when Lenin put his ideas into practice, he found, and stated, they could only be enforced by terror.

Socialism is opposed to nature (there is no "new" man) and ultimately, in a completely socialist country such as Russia, for instance, the outdated and unworkable theories of socialism can only be obtained by the use of force and terror. Freedom is gradually eroded in countries afflicted with the disease of socialism, the people are conditioned and fall an easy prey when communism takes over.

Mr. Smith may view this fact with pleasure, but I do not. I feel alarmed and I wish more people were aware of this grave danger to our liberties. It is a favorite communist ploy to ridicule those who have discovered their sly methods of conquest and this method of ridiculing people of whom they say "they see a communist under every bed" has been very successful in lulling people into a false sense of security.

The price of liberty is eternal vigilance. A cliche maybe, but a terribly true one. — M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra St.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of May 23, 1913:

WINNIPEG — That Vancouver Island is an ideal home for English emigrants is the opinion of Miss Dalbiac, field secretary of the British Women's Immigration Association, who went west recently with forty domestic servants who were placed on Vancouver Island. Miss Dalbiac last year brought 1,200 women to Canada, and says that if an experiment now in operation on Vancouver Island is successful she will bring out 2,000 more.

The experiment is in the nature of a poultry farm and school, which has been opened on the island for the purpose of instructing women from the British Isles. Miss Dalbiac says the women she has brought here include skilled labor as well as the domestic class.

Dam Project Symbol of Africa's Division

By DAVID TERESHCHUK
New Statesman

The massive Cabora Bassa dam now being built in Portuguese Mozambique provokes some strong passions. For its many opponents across the world it is a concrete symbol of white racialist determination to retain power in southern Africa.

South Africa has come north from her natural defence line to help build the dam, pay the lion's share of its cost and take most of the electricity it will produce, while Mozambique and Rhodesia will gain much mutual benefit from the grandiose development scheme of which the dam is the vital core.

Cabora Bassa also demonstrates which side of Africa's racial split Western capitalists feel their interests lie. Despite Kenneth Kaunda's denunciation of Cabora Bassa as "a crime against humanity" and many other international protests, French, German and Italian firms (and subsidiaries of British ones) have drawn together to take part in the work.

A visitor to this bulwark of modern-day colonialism might be forgiven for expecting to find a world of ungodly solidarity, one which brought alive in human terms the tableau of multi-national capital joining hands with white supremacy. In fact, though, solidarity is in short supply at Cabora Bassa. To spend two weeks inside the embattled community which is building the dam is to live in a seething atmosphere of conflict and division.

At the centre of the Portuguese Army's triple rings of defence established to hold off the Frelimo guerrillas who have sworn to destroy the dam, sits Songo Township. On a plateau 600 metres above the dam site on the Zambesi river, and overlooking the black labor compound, Songo is home for all Cabora Bassa's white workers. The offices of the South African-led construction consortium, ZAMCO, and of the Portuguese authorities who oversee their work, are both there. But contractor and customer are two miles apart.

"Who else but the bloody Portuguese would make themselves so inaccessible?" complained an exasperated South African engineer. ZAMCO men seem to spend most of their days fuming about the Por guese, who are quite blithe about the frayed nerves they cause. They insist that all official communication should be in Portuguese; after all, it's their country and their dam.

The multi-lingual administrative assistant at ZAMCO has his desk covered with translations of memos between the German, French, and English-speaking members of the consortium. "That's work enough," he cries, "but whenever something has to be referred to the Portuguese, I've got to work on it all over again."

Away from their desks and drills, the South Africans have a considerable scorn for their clients on a personal and (perhaps inevitably) a racial level. The township manager, Clem Gething, who showed me round Songo with a proprietary flourish, considers the Portuguese to be "worse than kaffirs."

Many of the South Africans object to the lax way that the Portuguese treat Mozambique's indigenous black population. One night in the township's social club, a Portuguese surveyor brought in his new, black wife to be greeted by a ripple of dismay along the rowdy tables of Afrikaaners. Forks were dropped, fingers were pointed, and broad muscular backs were turned. The couple sat to eat in silence.

The community is afflicted by a heavy claustrophobic mood. They cannot travel out of Songo except on a twice-daily military convoy, for which special permits are needed. It runs the gauntlet of regular Frelimo attacks to the provincial capital of Tete, 140 miles away. There is also a six-seater airplane service, but it is expensive and at this time of year is frequently cut off by heavy rains.

big-game hunters among the South African contingent, who are not allowed to venture out to indulge their hobby.

Clem Gething recently got himself into trouble with the Portuguese for openly complaining that perhaps he should apply to Frelimo for a hunting licence. Songo's very functional-looking bars are continually well attended, and frustration often spills over into violence.

The Yukon gold-rush atmosphere might have been muted a little by the settling of wives and children along with many workers. But in fact this hopefully steadying move has brought its own problems. Single men have their own quarters, long low huts divided into cubicle-size units usually shared between two. They form an irksome contrast with the family houses, which range from the A-type (luxurious) to the C-type (roughly equivalent to a small bungalow).

Social facilities are separate, as well, and much of the security guards' energy is taken up ensuring that the bachelors, who often work night shifts and spend aimless days in the sun, keep to their own swimming pool and do not chat up their colleagues' wives.

An earnest South African Calvinism permeates the administration of the township despite its international population, and whenever a prostitute is found to have slipped in (usually by favoring a pilot or convoy driver) she is very promptly flown out.

With so much internal strife to occupy everyone, Cabora Bassa demonstrates little obvious nervousness about the external threat from Frelimo. Portuguese troops are seen lolling round the township with little to do. Obviously the emphasis is placed out in the bush with Chief of Staff Gen. Kaulza di Arriaga's much-vaunted "three circles of defence." Not that the civilians have great faith in the Portuguese Army. Rhodesians and South Africans express a ribald contempt ("half-pissed peasants, most of them") which doughly reflects the official concern felt in their home countries.

There have been frequent high level talks involving the security services of all three white states, and towards the end of last year, Portugal's prime minister had to rebuke Ian Smith for spreading alarm about the military situation in Mozambique. Peter Niesewand's detention was originally prompted by a story he wrote which reported Frelimo attacks on the railway line for Cabora Bassa supplies.

The frequent response from Cabora Bassa workers to international criticism — from those, that is, who rationalise their position beyond saying they are only in it for the money — is to present the project as one benefiting both black and white populations.

The Germans particularly are fond of this line, and a group of Siemens engineers insisted: "The dam is neutral. Once it is built it is there for enriching whoever runs the country, blacks or Portuguese." Their belief in heavy industrialisation as the ideal development for a poor country, is matched by a similar confidence in their own safety as foreigners.

The theory that Frelimo has abandoned its aim of destroying the dam has circulated widely this year, but the Frelimo office in Dar-es-Salaam refute it strongly. Joquim Chissano, in charge of Frelimo's headquarters in Tanzania, uncompromisingly regards Cabora Bassa as a non-transferable cog in the Portuguese machine of exploitation and repression.

To leave the dam alone, he says, would be like ignoring a Portuguese military HQ "because we might need the building after independence". He insists their attack will come in their own time and in their own way. "We will measure the sacrifices which are necessary. We will not go as adventurers, we know what we do."

Does Frelimo include civilian workers among its targets? "We are not going to give letters to our bullets to say that is so and so, don't kill him. The people who are involved in building Cabora Bassa are the same as the soldier who is involved in the war against us."

The builders of Cabora Bassa, already far from being a happy community, may yet have their nerves even further frayed.

Swiss Embarrassed By New Attitudes

By ROD CHAPMAN
Manchester Guardian

BERNE — A report that Switzerland is moving away from its traditional neutrality has caused embarrassment among government officials here.

The report appeared in the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, which said that the current visit of the Swiss Foreign Minister, M. Graber, and the Swiss presence at the preparatory talks for a European security conference, indicated that Switzerland was beginning to take a more positive attitude towards international problems.

The paper claimed that, by this apparent shift in diplomatic stance, the Swiss government was attempting to condition the Swiss public to the inevitability of Swiss entry into the United Nations.

Although the Egyptian newspaper is probably duty bound to arrive at such a conclusion, the Swiss can hardly dispute the accuracy of the analysis. It comes at a time when the Swiss government is flexing its supposedly neutral muscles in almost unprecedented fashion.

Graber's Egyptian visit is obviously by way of a diplomatic overture to the idea that Switzerland would not be averse to playing the role of mediator in the Middle East crisis. Just a month ago the foreign minister was discussing the Middle East in Geneva with United Nations Secretary General, Kurt Waldheim.

While Graber is in Cairo, the Economics Minister, M. Brugger, is off to Washington for talks with American officials on the forthcoming round of GATT talks in Geneva, and on President Nixon's new European initiative.

The government is aware that Switzerland is missing valuable opportunities of making its international presence felt by not being represented at the UN, and a consultative commission has been set up to study the possibility of Swiss membership. Its report, however, will not be placed before the government until next year.

The issue is one that stirs conflicting emotions among the Swiss people. Although Waldheim has said he does not think Swiss neutrality would be compromised by UN membership, his opinion is disputed by many Swiss. In a parliamentary debate on the subject last year, the right-wing Republican Movement (better described by the title it has since assumed, the Movement Against Undue Foreign Influence) came out strongly against membership. The Social Democrats, predictably favored immediate entry.

The sharp division among the political parties is reflected in public opinion polls. One, conducted a year ago, highlighted the general confusion on the subject. Only 23 per cent of those questioned favored Swiss entry, while 33 per cent were against the idea and the remaining 44 per cent were "don't knows."

Switzerland signed the Human Rights Convention of the Council of Europe in December but cannot ratify the signature until it changes two constitutional articles banning Jesuit activities in the country and forbidding the setting up of new monasteries. The government has been exerting discreet pressure on public opinion to abolish the articles and the nation will vote on the issue on May 20.

The basic problem facing reformists is that the Swiss government is not only a prisoner of its own lethargy — and of its public basic conservatism — but is also chained to a constitution dating back to 1848.

The constitution came into being as a patchwork designed to form the cantons into a sketchily unified state after a civil war partially caused by the Jesuits. A government commission has recently completed a study of the possibility of totally revising the Constitution, but critics say the questionnaire on which the study was based was inadequate, and that a catalogue of basic human rights should precede any new federal constitution.

Watergate Lesson for Canada

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

One good aspect of the Watergate affair in the United States is that it provides a climate in which Canadians — and the Canadian government — can objectively assess the limits which the government has placed on the release of public documents. The corruption is not Canadian, therefore no Canadian interests are involved; but the Watergate affair puts on display what can happen when a government expands its rights to secrecy to protect, not the State, but a political party and its servants.

The supreme importance of Watergate is not the original break-in and bugging, but the efforts made afterwards by the president's closest advisers, and even the president, to block documents and evidence which would show to what high levels the corruption had risen.

Last March 15 Canada's president of the Privy Council, Allan MacEachen, tabled in the Commons a policy paper stating under what conditions the government would release papers, documents and reports. Most of the paper was taken up with listing the government's 21 reasons for refusing release.

This package to protect the secrets of government would be sufficient to permit a future government of Canada to have its own Watergate and contend that it was withholding information from Parliament and public on the basis of criteria laid down by this government.

For instance, three exemptions read, "legal opinions or advice provided for the use of the government", "papers containing information, the release of which could allow or result in direct personal financial gain or loss by a person or a group of persons" and "papers relating to negotiations leading up to a contract until the contract has been executed or the negotiations have been concluded".

Last week a former attorney-general of the United States was indicted on a charge of obstructing justice by accepting a $200,000 secret political donation in return for attempting to influence the investigations of the Securities and Exchange Commission on behalf of the donor. The Canadian exemptions could have been called into service to protect him.

Another exemption: "Papers reflecting on the personal competence or character of an individual." The character, or lack of it, in some of the president's closest advisers was crucial to Watergate, and the president himself tried to prevent the publication of documents and the calling of witnesses which would bear on the matter until press and public pressure forced him to give way, and also to get rid of the advisers.

Another Canadian exemption: "Papers, the release of which would be detrimental to the security of the State." This is the exemption which most people would be most likely to allow. Yet in the United States it was perverted to conceal the Pentagon Papers — a massive documentation of lying to America by its government — and a U.S. court dismissed charges against Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo, who had released the Papers, because of misconduct by the government.

MacEACHEN

We could go on, through almost all the exemptions set down by the Ottawa government. When Mr. MacEachen first produced them, New Democrat Stanley Knowles argued that they should be withdrawn. Mr. Knowles contended that the policy governing publication should be worded as it had been worded by a new member of the Commons in 1969.

That member had said, "It seems to me we have done this: Somewhere, way back, we started from the assumption that everything was secret and that only the minimum information possible should be released. Surely a far better and more democratic approach would be to proceed on the assumption that everything is open, and only to withhold information from the general public when this is clearly necessary on the grounds of public interest or for security reasons."

The member who said those words is the minister of regional Economic Expansion, Donald Jamieson.

Perhaps he now wishes he had bitten his tongue. But what he said was right. Mr. MacEachen tried to reassure Mr. Knowles that the exemptions were only guidelines to help MPs in questioning the government. He said that nine of them were "in accordance with United States practice". All of the examptions we have quoted were among those nine.

The New Democrats asked that unanimous consent be given to allow the debate to continue. It was denied. The government's exemptions stand.

The government should learn from Watergate. However pure its motives in producing the exemptions, Watergate has shown how a government of the future could distort them for its own improper purposes.

The government should withdraw its statement on exemptions, and agree that all shall be open except when it can be demonstrated that the public's r3al good or the public's real security is involved.

Closer to Heaven?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Canadian astronomers have persuaded the federal government that they need an $18-million new telescope and, with an adroitness we haven't met for several years, added that it should be installed on the Island of Hawaii. In words as beguiling as orchids, they told federal officials that the site they favored was one of the best in the world, allowing them to observe the entire sky except for about 30 degrees around the South Pole.

Aloha, aloha, aloha.

It is, of course, very difficult to argue with an astronomer who says he has found the best infra-red site in the world, even when you can almost hear him shouting: "Surf's up!" The layman may be convinced that Hawaii is the only place to which a trustee can go to study music programs for schools, but flounder hopelessly when it comes to infra-red matters.

There are some who would say that Hawaii is about as close to Heaven as one can get. Maybe, after all, the logical place for a telescope.

$3,500 Scholarship

Robert McDougall, a fourth-year history student who is this year's University of Victoria valedictorian, has won a $3,500 scholarship from the Canada Council.

McDougall, a former Alma Mater Society president, is one of three fourth-year UVic students to get the special MA scholarship.

Other winners are Mark E. Bailey, a fourth-year political science student, and Brent G. Mullin, fourth-year student of English literature.

The 100 scholarships awarded this year went to Canadian students of exceptional promise at the honors BA level for a year of graduate study in the humanities or social sciences. Total value of the awards is $367,500.

GRADUATED from Royal Military College of Canada in Kingston, Ont., is Vernon Wayne Dunne, son of Mrs. D. M. Dunne of Sooke. Dunne received a B.Eng. degree in electrical engineering.

Pensioner Lunch Program Aided by Horizon's Grant

One of Sooke's two old age pensioners organizations, No. 88, has received a $1,000 New Horizons grant from the federal government.

The money will be used to buy stainless steel cooking wear, card tables and other equipment for the group's hot lunch program for pensioners.

The group has been serving hot lunches at minimal charge each Tuesday and Thursday in Sooke Hall since 1965, and is in need of proper equipment, said Phyllis Johnson, second vice-president.

"It's to get the old people so they get out of their home," said Mrs. Johnson. "Some of them are not poor at all but they're lonely."

The pensioners' group has more than 80 members, she said, and Sooke's other pensioners' group has about the same.

Former 403 Members To Witness Ceremony

OROMOCTO, N.B. (CP) — Past and current members of a Canadian Armed Forces squadron which has served three roles since the early days of the Battle of Britain are to gather here June 15-17 for formal presentation of the unit's "standard," the squadron flag.

The first Royal Canadian Air Force unit to be formed overseas under a special section of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, 403 Squadron was credited with the destruction of 123 enemy aircraft during the Second World War. It shared in the destruction of at least seven other enemy planes.

But the squadron had been put in mothballs twice since the end of the war, reactivated the first time to serve as an RCAF auxiliary unit based at Calgary and most recently to carry out its current job of training helicopter pilots at Canadian Forces Base Gagetown.

Tracking down the hundreds of officers and men who served with 403 Squadron during its varied history was no easy job. They're scattered across Canada and parts of Europe.

"We even found one ex-squadron member living in Dublin who is writing the history of 403," said Capt. Fraser Webb, a helicopter pilot-instructor with the unit at Base Gagetown. "We want to make sure he gets here."

The reunion organizers have arranged special get-together breakfasts and a formal ball during the weekend.

The battle honors on the standard will date back to the Second World War. The squadron served with the Royal Air Force's fighter command and 2nd Tactical Air Force for more than four years.

Flt. Lt. G. P. (Buzz) Beurling, the Malta ace, scored his 30th kill while serving with 403 Squadron. He was credited with destruction of a Focke-Wulfe 190 near Poix, France, Sept. 24, 1943.

Thirteen Spitfire IXBs of the squadron carried out the first bombing attacks by Spitfire aircraft in northwest Europe when they attacked a V-1 rocket site near Le Treport, France, in April, 1944.

MOVED TO THE RHINE

The squadron advanced to the Rhine with the Allied armies following the invasion of Europe. It was disbanded at Passburg, Germany, after the end of the European hostilities.

It was reactivated at Calgary as an RCAF auxiliary squadron Oct. 15, 1948 and designated a fighter bomber unit flying Harvards and Mustangs.

Brought back into the armed forces as a helicopter training squadron in 1968, 403 Squadron was first based at CFB Petawawa but transferred to CFB Gagetown in 1972.

Alberta Eastern

Alberta Eastern Gas Ltd. earned $2,406,389 during the nine months ended March 31, including an extraordinary gain of $1,921,250 from the sale of property.

The earnings, equivalent to 55 cents a share, compared with $9,579 or two-tenths of a cent a share the year before.

The company, which produces natural gas, increased its gross operating revenue to $1,373,759 from $571,674.

Hydrocarbons

Canadian Hydrocarbons Ltd. reports earnings of $1,841,000 or 34 cents a share in the first quarter of 1973 compared with $2,176,000 or 41 cents a share during the corresponding period last year.

Gross revenue was $31,224,000 compared with $28,675,000 in 1972.

The company's quarterly report says these earnings reflect an increase in the provision for income taxes despite earnings before income taxes in 1973 showing a reduction to $2,760,000 from $3,071,000 in 1972.

The earnings also reflected the adoption in 1973 of equity accounting for the investment inn Canadian Homestead Oils Ltd.

Wiley Oilfield

Wiley Oilfield Hauling Ltd. has reported gross income of $5,006,747, net earnings of $1,049,779 and 50.4 cents per share for the six months ending March 31, 1973.

The compared with $4,221,006, $729,112 and 42.1 cents respectively for the same period last year.

Bethlehem Copper

The president of Bethlehem Copper Corp. Ltd. says he's optimistic about the company's earnings for this year.

Patrick Reynolds said in the company's annual report that copper prices have risen steadily since January and "we are optimistic in our profit projects for 1973."

The company's net earnings amounted to $5 million or 79 cents a share.

Reynolds said the Vancouver-based company spent about $380,000 last year on exploration in British Columbia. The company has also done some drilling in Ireland, he said.

Petrofina

This compares with $5.82 million or 58 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Gross revenue was $70.3 million, up from $59 million.

P. A. Nadeau, president, said the decrease in net income resulted from two fires which impaired refinery operations during the period.

Kenting

Kenting Ltd. of Calgary reports earnings of $197,000 or 32 cents a share in the first quarter of 1973 comared with $144,000 or 25 cents a share in 1972.

Gross revenue was $7,790,000, up from $5,519,000 the previous year.

Company president J. W. Strath said the 37-per-cent increase resulted primarily from the inclusion of sales from three recently acquired companies for a complete year. Sales from the companies were partially included in the 1972 results.

B.C. BANK UP 128%

The Bank of British Columbia's balance of revenue — net income before appropriation for losses and income taxes — soared by 128 per cent in the six months to April 30, 1973 to $476,720 from $209,169 a year earlier.

Net profit for the period was 80 per cent higher at $133,720, equal to 26 cents a share, compared with $74,169 or 14 cents a share in the first half of fiscal 1972.

The bank's total revenue was $5,761,597 in the latest period, up from $6,209,985. Biggest contributor to revenue is income from loans, which rose to $7,508,407 from $5,044,012.

Albert Hall, chairman and president, noted in the half-year report that total assets now exceed $268 million, against $208 million a year ago, a growth of 29 per cent.

Two new branches were opened during the latest six-month period, bringing to 22 the number now in operation. Three more branches are scheduled to open before year-end.

Island Copper's Ball Mills Ordered, But Not Needed

The Island Copper Mine at Port Hardy has spent $6 million for three ball mills — and today it does not need them.

The mills, being constructed at Victoria Machinery Depot, were ordered to assist the company to grind particularly tough ore.

Subsequently, the mining operations have moved into a softer grade of ore and the present machinery is grinding at near-peak efficiency.

However, the company will go ahead with plans to install the additional mills in August because it can not afford to gamble that the present type of ore will continue.

The Port Hardy operation is designed to handle 33,000 tons of ore per day.

In 1972 tough ore — a mixture of hard and soft rock — was encountered and throughput declined to 23,000 tons per day.

The company decided to spend the $6 million to purchase three secondary grinding mills to handle the tough ore.

This year the company's giant scoops have reached ore containing only soft rock, which grinds readily to powder in the six mills currently in use.

As a result, the company is handling about 31,680 tons of ore per day, close to rated capacity.

A spokesman said if tough ore is encountered in the future the throughput would decline again. However, by August the three ball mills will be added and will head off the problem, maintaining a rated capacity near the current level.

The present six autogenous mills work on a gravity system with the ore being ground by revolving it and letting the rocks grind each other. Tough ore reduces to a granular substance, soft ore becomes the desired powder.

When the ore is reduced to powder it is floated and copper substances come to the surface and are skimmed off.

This produces copper concentrate, which is exported to Japan.

Island Copper produces 219,000 tons of copper concentrate per year, which is about 50 per cent copper.

At an average price of 60 cents per pound the 110,000 tons of copper in the concentrate would be worth $1,200 per ton or about $132 million.

VW Vows No Price Hike

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Volkswagen Canada Ltd. said today the company does not anticipate price increases to match the latest round by Volkswagen of America Inc.

The United States company announced its third set of increases for the year Tuesday when it raised prices an average of 2.9 per cent.

Volkswagen Canada has increased prices twice this year — the last time May 11 — and the company spokesman said the two increases here were greater than those in the U.S. and now about match the three increases in the U.S.

"We hope that this will carry us through the model year," the spokesman said.

BRITISH COLUMBIA ENERGY COMMISSION

PUBLIC HEARING ON MATTERS CONCERNING THE NATURAL GAS INDUSTRY IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

A Public Hearing will be held by the British Columbia Energy Commission at the 21st Floor, 1177 West Hastings Street, Vancouver, B.C., commencing at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, June 12th, 1973, to inquire into matters relating to the natural gas industry in British Columbia referred to the Commission for its advice under Part II of the Energy Act, S.B.C. 1973, Chapter 29, by Order in Council 1481, which matters include, among others, the following:

(1) the desirability of establishing a minimum reserve of British Columbia natural gas for British Columbia requirements as a prerequisite to any increase in the amount of British Columbia natural gas exported from the Province, the amount of gas which might properly be so reserved and the manner in which such reserve might be established and maintained;

(2) the level of present and anticipated field prices of British Columbia natural gas, the factors which influence such field prices, and whether such prices appear to be in the British Columbia public interest;

(3) the level of present and anticipated prices of natural gas delivered to British Columbia consumers, the desirability of maintaining such prices at moderate and stable levels and the manner in which such levels may be established and maintained in the British Columbia public interest;

(4) present and anticipated royalties payable to the Province as the owner of British Columbia natural gas and whether the said royalties fairly reflect the value of such gas after due allowance for costs and risks incurred in its discovery and removal;

(5) the rate of exploration for natural gas in British Columbia and whether and in what manner such exploration might be accelerated in the British Columbia public interest;

(6) the agreements of the 1st day of March, 1973, between Westcoast Transmission Company Limited and El Paso Natural Gas Company, whether the said agreements are in the British Columbia public interest and what action, if any, ought to be taken to protect the British Columbia public interest in respect to the said agreements and any matters ancillary thereto.

All persons desiring to be heard at the said Public Hearing are requited to send to the offices of the Commission at 21st Floor, 1177 West Hastings Street, Vancouver, B.C., 10 copies of a Notice of Intention to Appear stating the nature of their interest and setting forth an outline of the evidence or submission which they intend to present, such Notice to be received by the Commission not later than Tuesday, the 5th day of June, 1973.

By order of the Commission,
JAMES H. RHODES,
Chairman.

A Sausage? Jail? Boomerang? No. It's Rejected Apartment

"It looks like a jail," said Ald. William Noel.

"It looks like a sausage," said Mayor Hugh Curtis.

Saanich council members were commenting Tuesday on drawings of a boomerang-shaped apartment proposed in a land use contract by Racquet Club of Victoria Holdings Ltd. for property at McKenzie and Gordon Head.

They turned the plan back.

"Council would like a super-duper apartment on that corner, with wide setbacks; a real nice apartment," said Ald. William Campbell.

Curtis, noting the drawings presented showed a standard sort of structure, despite the unusual angle of two wings, said it looked "ground out of a machine."

Other comments suggested the sketches made the building look like "a mass," and "fairly plain."

Curtis said staff should be instructed to tell the owners, "we're not happy with this building and we're not going to approve it until we are."

Under land use contracts council has wider control over building design than in ordinary zoning applications.

Ald. Frank Waring said he felt the land use contract was "an extremely poor way of handling a single building like this."

The application would still have to be sent to a public hearing, "and I can't help feeling the public hearing should come first," he said.

In other business, council instructed staff to draw up a swimming pool security bylaw for enforcement this summer.

"Our citizens are not protected at the moment mith fences, latches and spring-loaded gates out of the reach of toddlers," said Curtis, asking that a simple bylaw be drawn up.

Municipal solicitor D. A. M. Patterson said the Municipal Act gives authority for a council to deal with existing and prospective swimming pools.

"This is not an excuse for parents. It's not a great panacea. The onus still rests with parents . . . we hope no tragedy occurs," Curtis said.

Municipal manager W. M. Tremayne and engineer Bob Daye said it was impossible to state how many private pools there are in Saanich.

Council took no action on a CBC request for support in an upcoming application to have the CBC take over channel 10 for the purpose of inaugurating television production studios in Victoria.

Curtis left the chair during discussion, saying he had "very definite views and I don't want to influence council."

But when aldermen indicated they did not understand the request, Curtis was asked to sp eakfrom the floor. He said the letter meant council should either support it, not support it, or take no action.

Noel wondered what part the municipality had in the question, which will be decided by the Canadian Radio Television Commission after public hearings.

The letter said Victoria is the only provincial capital without CBC production facilities. Canadian diversity, essential to Canadian unity, requires production centres across the land, it said.

Saanich Puts a Checkrein On Horse-Riding Bylaw

A park-use bylaw trotted out three times in the last 11 years was reined in again Tuesday by Saanich council attempting to control horseback riding on beaches.

"Too restrictive," said Ald. Frank Waring, urging the draft bylaw be sent back to committee for more study.

"It almost looks like it was drawn up by a committee of cranks," he added.

"That's a great line," Mayor Hugh Curtis responded.

Ald. Alan Newberry explained the intention was to prohibit horseback riding on all beaches but Mt. Douglas Park beach in response to a request fron Garden City Horsemen's Club.

Riding on the one beach would be controlled by the season — between October and April.

Waring said he could not see why there was objection to riding on other beaches. He favored Cadboro Bay beach.

Council should encourage beach riding, he said. It was a good way of occupying youth, especially teenaged girls, Waring said, noting Saanich was spending $10,000 on youth counsellors this year.

"Horseback riding is a great sport," agreed Ald. Edith Gunning, but she disagreed that Cadboro Bay beach should be open to riders.

Waring again cited the draft bylaw, presented in 1962 and again in 1967 without council endorsement.

"This says you can't lie on the grass in your bathing suit . . . it's ridiculous."

"You wouldn't want to lie in your bathing suit with horses galloping around you," Newberry said.

There is no restriction now on horses being ridden on Saanich beaches.

But the proposed bylaw would cover not only horses but donkeys, mules and other animals, with a multitude of prohibitions in 24 restrictive clauses.

Punishment would be up to $100 with 30 days in jail for conviction.

Park users would be forbidden to let dogs in the water, wear transparent bathing suits, swim without a bathing suit, sunbathe anywhere but on the beach, damage plants, litter, pitch a tent, wash a car, trap animals, shoot, sell without a permit, allow chickens to run loose, molest each other, post bills, wear shoes with heels if playing tennis or lawn bowling, enter women's change rooms if male and vice versa if female, and park a car for more than 15 minutes at a stretch between sunset and sunrise — except after a public demonstration when the limit would be stretched to one hour.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 22-year-old Victoria man who beat up his girlfriend in a local beverage room was sentenced to three months in jail for his "brutal behavior" by provincial court judge Edmond St. Jorre Tuesday.

Donald Carasella, also known as Peter Jennings, of 1215 Alderman, admitted punching the woman in the face and then kicking her in the abdomen before his actions were curbed by other patrons.

"I just went out of my head," Carasella told court, "I never hit her before," he added, explaining his girlfriend had left him a note May 20 saying she wanted to end their relationship.

The woman was taken to hospital with internal injuries and later released.

A 47-year-old Victoria man who ordered a meal valued at $1.40 and couldn't pay, was fined $35.

Albert E. Anderson, 1446 Gladstone, said he thought he could charge the meal at Melrose Cafe, 622 Yates.

Judge St. Jorre directed the man to make restitution for the meal as "the decent thing to do."

In traffic court, Judge Harold Alder fined Victoria bus driver John G. McEwen, 23, of 1331 Pandora $350 and ordered his driving licence suspended for one month except for work purposes after a May 21 charge of impaired driving.

Ernest Olsen, 55, of Brentwood Bay was fined $350 after a May 12 impaired driving incident.

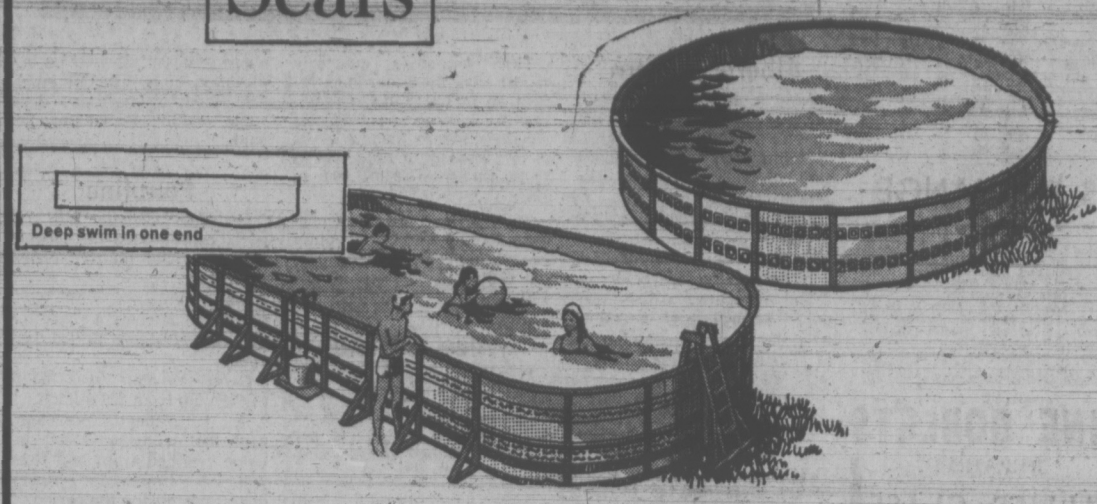

Lure to Canadians

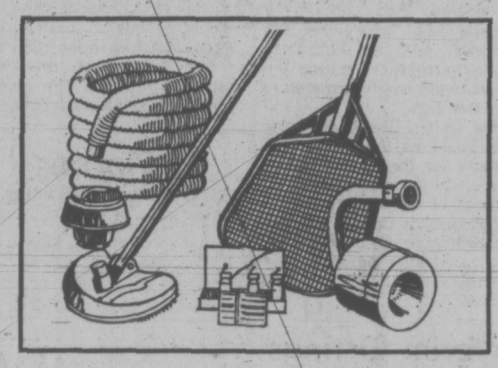

TRENTON, N.J. (CP) — The state of New Jersey has received a $10,000 federal grant for a publicity program to attract Canadian tourists. State officials said the grant, made under a federal program to increase tourism, will pay half the cost of French- and English language advertisements to be published in Canada in the next few weeks.

ICELAND DEFIES RN

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — A government minister says that Iceland's handful of patrol boats will soon defy the Royal Navy's cordon around trawlers inside the disputed 50-mile fishing zone and again cut British trawl lines.

The statement from Fisheries Minister Ludvik Josefsson came Tuesday as feeling here intensified that Iceland should consider charging Britain with aggression before the United Nations Security Council.

All political parties in Iceland are united in their condemnation of the British naval intervention, referred to here as "invasion."

As Iceland considered its next moves, about 30 British trawlers with navy protection were fishing Tuesday night well inside Iceland's self-proclaimed limits.

Fisheries Minister Josefsson, of the People's Alliance, a Communist grouping in the governing three-party coalition, said: "We will soon begin coast guard action, cutting the wires of the British trawlers."

He and other political leaders agreed that despite Royal Navy protection, the British trawlermen are in a worse situation than before because fishing in a tight group will make their catch much smaller.

Josefsson suggested that Iceland send an ultimatum to NATO demanding that all British naval ships should leave Iceland's fisheries zones within 48 hours.

If this was not complied with, Iceland would extend the current ban on British military aircraft landing at Keflavik airport to all NATO aircraft, thus making the base completely ineffective for the North Atlantic defence alliance.

Kindergarten French Study Asked

Greater Victoria school board is seeking a $1,500 grant from the Educational Research Institute of B.C. to finance evaluation of the board's kindergarten French immersion program.

The board decided Tuesday night to apply for the grant and agreed on the design of the research program to be carried out.

The experiment in French immersion begins in September when three special kindergartens will be set up in the city. At Richmond Elementary 23 pupils will participate in a half-day, 100 per cent French class while 24 children will enroll in a half-day, 50 per cent French, 50 per cent English program.

At Cloverdale Elementary another 24 children will attend a half-day, 50 per cent French, 50 per cent English kindergarten.

In order to evaluate the effect of the immersion program, the board agreed to develop a research design which would answer the following questions:

—Is there any advantage gained in beginning to teach the second language at the primary rather than the secondary level?

—Do other aspects of education suffer from the introduction of a second language?

—What problems are posed by the experiment?

—Are there levels of ability below which the teaching of a second language is of dubious value?

—Do children enrolled in the total immersion program make substantial gains in the mastery of the language over those in the half-time French program?

Own Computer Plug For School Board

Installation of a "Remcom 4780 remote job entry terminal" was approved by Greater Victoria school board Tuesday night.

In layman's language this means the school board staff will have its own computer terminal and no longer be running back and forth to the data centre.

Computer programs for the school district payroll, student time-tabling and all board financial accounts will be processed directly through the terminal at school board offices.

Board officials say installation will not mean greater use of computer services.

Recommendation for the switch-over came from a Price Waterhouse Associates report which said the remote job entry terminal will be "a significant improvement both in the cost and efficiency of present data processing activity."

Data processing is now done by contract with a private firm and in 1972 cost the board $82,100.

With a terminal at the school board, yearly operational costs will total about $40,000 and initial installation and conversion costs are estimated at $9,047.

The terminal will be linked by private line to the computer utility located at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver.

OUT OF MUD AND INTO THE SOUP

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Edmonton men charged with break, theft and enter after their car was pulled out of a muddy area by a tow truck were remanded until May 28 when they appeared in court Tuesday.

Keith Riddell, 20, and Manard Hamstra, 19, were charged with breaking into a city department store Monday.

At the time of their arrest, police said color TVs and stereos worth $7,000 were in their possession.

Manitoba Plans Homes' Cash

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Housing and Renewal Corporation hopes to embark on its first programs for encouraging home ownership later this year, Municipal Affairs Minister Howard Pawley said Tuesday.

The programs, to be instituted with the co-operation of the federal government and under legislation now before the Commons, will provide subsidies of up to $600 a year for families whose income is less than $6,000, he said.

Pawley said the provincial government plans to assist at least 200 families buy their own homes during the first year under one of the joint programs.

Although details of this and three other programs have not yet been worked out, the minister said Manitoba expects to participate "in as large a way as possible."

Other programs include one to give residents of rental public housing options to buy their homes for the first time, a $100 million-a-year land assembly program and special assistance for rehabilitating older homes.

Manitoba's NDP government launched a massive program of public housing soon after its election in 1969.

While the crown housing corporation will continue to build rental units, Pawley said the prime feature of the new federal programs is the variety of options they will give Manitobans.

"Up until now, we've had to depend on public housing, because this was the only door available to the province," he said.

"I don't think we should be hung up on public housing or home ownership — people should have their choice."

The new home ownership program will provide subsidies to help families purchase their own homes. Under the program, monthly payments for principle, interest and taxes will not exceed 22 per cent of monthly income.

Pawley said the subsidies will vary along with interest rates and the length of mortgage to allow this percentage to be met.

The maximum term of the mortgages will be 40 years and the minimum interest rates 7⅝ per cent a year. Federal and provincial subsidies of up to $300 a year each will diminish as a family's income approaches the $6,000 level.

Long-Distance Cut

EDMONTON (CP) — Equipment failure at the Edmonton office of Alberta Government Telephones Tuesday knocked out 50 per cent of the capacity of handling long-distance calls, the company reported today. The failure of undetermined origin occurred shortly after 11 a.m. and only 50 per cent of the 4-A switching machine was functional. Technicians were looking into the failure but it was not know when full capacity for long-distance calls would be resumed. "People should avoid unnecessary long-distance calls to Edmonton and the vicinity until the problem has been solved," a spokesman said.

Strike Set

CALGARY (CP) — City public health nurses voted 84-3 Tuesday to strike if the city does not accept a majority award presented by a conciliation board. Eleanor Jepson, president of the Public Health Nurses' Association, said she hoped the decision would cause the city to review its position and continue talks with the nurses.

'She Came at Me With Knife': Jo Ann

"The next thing I knew, she was coming at me with a rolling pin and a knife. The knife went into my hand."

Displaying the scarred hand, 17-year-old Jo Ann Anderson, charged with the non-capital murder of her mother, Shirley, 38, told a Supreme Court jury Tuesday what she remembered the night of her mother's death.

The girl testified she suffered a memory lapse after the attack.

Mrs. Anderson arrived home shortly after 5 p.m., said Jo Anne. "She went out and came back in . . ."

She told the jury she caught only a "glimpse" of her mother before she went out again.

"She came in and said to me 'I put some money in your coat and my credit card so that you can go out tonight and you can have the car and you can get some new clothes.'

"So I said that was fine. She went out and came back in and I believe she had gone to the car, I don't know, to get whatever she got for supper, and she came in and told me to get out and stay out and not to come back.

"And I asked her why, this is my home, this is my home just as much as it's your home, and the only reason why we can stay here is as long as I stay with you, and I haven't done anything.

"The next thing I knew she was coming at me with a rolling pin and a knife, the knife went into my hand . . . The next thing I remember was the car stalling at Cloverdale and Douglas and driving to the police station."

"Did she ever tell you to get out and stay out before?" asked Prosecutor George MacMinn.

The girl replied her mother had asked her to leave on other occasions after an argument but would always apologize moments later.

"Did you ever discuss with your mother the possibility of you being pregnant?" asked MacMinn.

"No," replied Jo Ann.

"You did not say to your mother, on one occasion, that you suspect you might be pregnant but weren't sure?"

"No."

"Jo Ann, have you ever taken drugs?"

"I tried marijuana once."

"Have you ever tried acid?"

"No."

Earlier in the week Jo Ann and a friend, Lori Drage, had made arrangements to go to the Empress Hotel Paint Cellar Friday night.

Before the stabbing Mrs. Anderson gave her daughter the money and keys to her car to go out for the evening.

Jo Ann testified she did not have a driver's licence but had used the car occasionally to run errands.

"Were you a little surprised that your mother offered you the car that night?" asked MacMinn.

"Not really, because she'd let me use it before," she said.

She said it was unusual, however, that her mother had offered the car for the entire evening.

Lori of 1125 Hillside, testified Mrs. Anderson telephoned her during the week of the stabbing and said, "Would you please promise me that you won't come back until five o'clock next Saturday morning."

Lori told the jury she had been to the Anderson's for occasional meals or coffee and had never heard Mrs. Anderson speak unkindly to Jo Ann.

"Did you eyes witness any fights or arguments between Jo Ann and her mother?" asked MacMinn.

She told the court she'd seen one argument over who was going to cook dinner.

Did Mrs. Anderson, to your knowledge, have any boy friends?" asked MacMinn.

"No."

"Would you agree that Mrs. Anderson was a good mother to Jo Ann?"

"Yes, she was."

Caught in the Middle —The Witness Dilemma

One of the most interesting aspects of the Watergate hearings so far, to me, has been the performances of the witnesses—not so much in what they've had to say, but in the witness role.

In any such hearing or in any court of law the witness is precisely that in the most elementary theatrical sense: a player on a stage. In some eight years of covering courts it was the thing that fascinated me most. You might meet some nondescript guy out in the hall before the court was called into session only to find him, an hour later, in the box, giving a passable imitation of Alfred Dreyfus. Yet the most articulate of men often seize up in that unaccustomed part and make burbling sounds that could only come from a village idiot.

Unless they are professionals of some sort the witness has nothing in his background or even in his preparation for the event to cause him to perform predictably. More often than not he has never in his life before been such a focal point of attention, yet here he is in the most dramatic position imaginable, actually raised up physically on a kind of platform, every eye and ear — the judge above, the lawyers and spectators below — turned in undivided attention upon him. Small wonder that so many witnesses babble.

I learned in those years of covering the courts that lawyers, however much they may rehearse their clients before their appearance, invariably stress that the worst thing a witness can do is to lie.

It is particularly evident in the Watergate hearings because, of course, the television lens zooms in on the witness and records every tell-tale flick of the eye or pursing of the lips. But it is equally true in a courtroom that a man or woman who twists the truth, or tells something less than it, stands all but nakedly revealed.

It always seemed to me the very essence of incorruptible justice that, though most of us go through our lives as unmitigated social liars, even the mildest fib in a courtroom causes a huge neon sign to balloon above the head of the witness, blinking on the word "Liar!"

The lawyers may not be entirely altruistic in this regard for the truth since they know that there's an adversary there just dying to pounce on the slightest evasion of any salient fact, thus to discredit the whole of the witness' testimony.

In my time as a court reporter I saw many an instance when a witness had told some little white lie, often with no real bearing on the case, that gave a smart lawyer the dry kindling to burn down the entirety of his evidence.

Judges, too, are notorious in cherishing the truth and nothing but the truth, which the witness has solemnly sworn, on an Old or New Testament, to tell, and do not take kindly to anything less.

It is, of course, the adversary system that causes the already bewildered witness to be lead into total bewilderment. In case after case I have seen witnesses who were examined, first, by a sympathetic lawyer, who visibly relaxed and grew in stature, thus leaving them entirely unprepared for the cross-examination by a hostile and frequently terrible-tempered legal beagle who tore off their limbs one by one.

In no other arena of life may a man experience such ego-building and such ego-destruction within a single day and the segue from expansive righteousness to injured and beleaguered innocence is one of life's most awkward transitions.

Even after those years of it as a spectator I never managed to accept the unpleasant tension that is the result of any litigation.

To those who work in the courtroom atmosphere every day it is simply a routine with certain well-defined rules, but the layman is always conscious that men or women are being made to appear incompetent or obtuse or prejudiced or just plain rotten in the interests of arriving at a supportive verdict. It is all very polite, very restrained, very much in control, but blows are being struck and though justice may prevail, as it most often does, it inflicts deep hurts.

The witness, often the innocent in the middle, feels that very directly since he is so painfully aware of the fact that he has little or no control over the conflict, though he is momentarily at the heart of it. In the Watergate hearings, no less than in a local courtroom, the witness takes on the appearance of a live, impaled moth, a horrible sight to see.

School Ultimatum To City

James Bay community school has received a one-month reprieve.

Greater Victoria School Board Tuesday night agreed to delay commencement of working drawings on the project until June 30, giving city council another month to decide whether they wish to join in on construction of facilities.

Last week a school board committee recommended the working drawings be started immediately without proposed community facilities, on the assumption the extra facilities could be added later if the city decided to join.

James Bay Community Association member Lorne De Girolamo appealed to the board, however, to delay the drawings and give the city a deadline.

The board agreed to notify the city "of the urgency concerning its possible participation" in the recreation facilities and to set the June 30 deadline.

MEETING SET UP

As a result of the decision, a meeting was set up this morning between representatives of the city, the board and the community association, to discuss the city's intentions.

The school board plans to build six extra classrooms, a library and activity room at James Bay Elementary in order to accommodate the transfer of all pupils from South Park School, which will be phased out in Sept., 1974.

The community association wishes to make the expanded school a community facility as well, with the addition of three multi-activity rooms, additional library and gym space, and a cafeteria costing $160,000.

The community group needs a commitment from the city to get the necessary funding for the project, and has received council support "in principle."

Before meeting this morning with some aldermen and members of the James Bay Community Association to discuss the porject, Mayor Peter Pollen said city council has discussed participation without reaching any firm conclusions.

He added, however: "Obviously the city can participate only to the extent of its financial ability, which is extremely limited.

"For the city to get into this activity to any significant degree would be beyond our current financial capacity."

Prison Debate Tonight

The drive of Metchosin and Albert Head residents to have William Head penitentiary moved is expected to come to a climax tonight at a mass meeting in Metchosin Community Hall.

The Metchosin Ratepayers' Association and the Albert Head Ratepayers' Association have banded together in an effort to get the prison, due to be upgraded from minimum to medium-security, closed down.

MRA chairman John Waterman said he expects representatives from all political parties to attend the 8 p.m. meeting.

A western region represenative of the federal penitentiary system will also be present.

Action to try to have the penitentiary removed was accelerated May 14 when three people were brutally attacked and hospitalized shortly after Lionel Ernest Blanchard, 32, escaped from the prison.

FIREARMS

He is to appear in Victoria provincial court Thurday on five charges which include robbery and violence, assault and causing grievous bodily harm.

Residents on Sandgate, where Colin Bowen was attacked, are planning to arm themselves to protect their families and have asked the RCMP Colwood for instruction.

The MRA and AHRA have asked Solicitor-General Warren Allmand to have the prison moved to Bentinck Island, site of a former leper colony, just inside Race Rocks.

Waterman said today he has been told that Bentinck was originally considered as a possible site for the prison.

"It was turned down," he said, "because the prison was to be temporary.

"William Head (the former quarantine station) already had the power and water at the standard they needed and it was considered too expensive to bring Bentinck's facilities up to the same standards.

"But they very nearly took Bentinck Island," he added.

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

This boy keeps beating up his younger brother. That girl keeps wetting her bed. This boy can handle his school work easily but won't without constant attention. That girl throws wild temper tantrums when she's teased.

Problems most parents know something about. But problems in these cases which have blossomed into nightmares. These kids are driving their families frantic. In the process they've become tangled in emotional knots.

On the top floor of the Eric Martin Institute, in bright rooms where kids can run and play and work and shout, a new program to put these children and their parents back on the track is showing promising results.

The children's unit, with room for 10 youngsters from infancy to age 15, opened last December, only the second of its kind in B.C.

Clinical director is Dr. Philip Ney, a child psychiatrist. He is full of praise for what he describes as a "bright" young staff, led by head nurse Mrs. Mavis Martin. It includes besides nurses and orderlies, social workers, a psychologist, occupational therapist and a teacher.

The natural ties which bind most parents and children sometimes snap and, reasons aside for the moment, the behavior patterns such children develop—from withdrawl to hyperactivity—can generate a family climate which drives everyone 'round the bend.

Some kids want to scrap continually, some wet beds or soil themselves, some can't keep still, some turn inward, some smash things, some are seasoned liars, some can't stop playing hookey.

Most have big troubles in school—with other kids or teachers or work. One has been suspened from kindergarten.

Boys outnumber girls in the children's unit, about three-to-one. Many of the children come from homes with just one parent. A substantial number, about 12 per cent, of the trouble children are adopted.

They come to live on the sixth floor at EMI for five weeks and most end up reluctant to leave.

The children's unit isn't a place for miracle cures but for turning around family situations which are rolling towards disaster so that—with little pushes from staff and family—they are rolling the other way.

When it works, parents deserve most of the credit, the staff says. It was parents who cared enough to give the unit a try, and inevitably, parents along with children have to overhaul their views.

The staff conceeds they are not likely to see some of the most disturbed children in the community because their parents don't care. But some have come from up-Island, the lower mainland and the interior.

The sixth floor doesn't look or function in the traditional hospital image. No uniforms for one thing. And there are bedrooms rather than wards, two doubles, one for four (usually younger children) and two singles, with children's, not hospital beds, bright curtains and bathrooms alongside.

Down a hall there is a barren cupboard-like room with window in the door, the so-called "time out room" where a rampaging older child will occasionally be locked for a short spell to cool down.

Ney says the time-out room is used so rarely he can't recall the last time. It's a "last resort" measure, used only when a youngster attacks a staff member or tries to destroy the place.

In general, the children's unit is a place where you can blow your stack without it being held against you.

There is also a 15-passenger bus which takes everyone on frequent outings. Swimming and skating are regular activities as are trips to parks — Beacon Hill, McKenzie Bay, China Beach. The group just got back this week from camping at Goldstream where some of the parents joined in.

"We try very hard to get parents and kids enjoying life together," says Ney.

Thursdays at suppertime parents come along to a conference room, pour themselves a coffee, and Ney leads a lively discussion on what it's all about.

They look at guidelines which can reasonably be expected of their children, ways to meet and improve on them.

Should two brothers be allowed to fight at all? Not at all, says the mother involved. Other parents suggest that's not reasonable. Everyone is left with something to think about.

Diphtheria Cases Up To 16 in Victoria

The number of people treated for diphtheria in Greater Victoria has risen to 16, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior public health officer, said today.

All have responded successfully to treatment in hospital, he added.

The four latest cases:

Two men, aged 23 and 25, whose symptoms were spotted in a doctor's office Friday.

Two girls, about age 8, who are classified as healthy carriers, meaning they are carrying the germ but not suffering from it. They were spotted in a recent survey in which 600 throat swabs were taken, said Whitbread.

The girls had previously been immunized and were not exhibiting any symptoms of the disease.

Whitbread had said earlier that public health staff were still looking for a healthy carrier responsible for the earlier local cases. But he said today it is very difficult to know whether the carriers have now been found.

Diphtheria immunization is given routinely at all baby clinics and through a program in elementary schools where parents give their permission.

But an outbreak on northern and western Vancouver Island earlier this year has led public health officials to urge parents to make certain their children have been immunized. The metro health board also makes booster shots available for adults at area clinics by appointment.

RECORD ENTRY ON HAND FOR SAILING CLASSICS

A record 24 boats will be pacing it out in the Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classics this weekend.

Deadline for registration was Tuesday and officials of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club expect to be working to midnight, computerising and preparing lists.

The Swiftsure gets under way 9:30 a.m. Saturday off Brotchie Ledge with a start line set between the navy's HMCS Porte de la Reine and the U.S. coast guard's Point Bennett.

The Juan de Fuca boats will get their start gun 15 minutes later.

Many of the large sailing armada are expected to tie up in the Inner Harbor Thursday, the remainder arriving in time for the Friday evening festivities.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen will welcome the visiting boats. This will be followed by the traditional roll call of boats.

TOT FIGHTS FOR LIFE AFTER JUGULAR CUT

A one-year-old Victoria girl continues to fight for her life today after an automobile accident.

Madeleine Hansen, daughter of Richard and Jean Hansen, 1077 Davie, suffered severe cuts to the jugular vein and head and internal injuries Monday after the three of them went through the windshield of a car in which they were riding.

The child's father, 18, is in good condition in Victoria General Hospital and the mother, 19, was released after treatment for minor injuries.

Colwood RCMP said Hansen lost control on a curve at Munns Road and Millstream and hit a utility pole. The car was demolished.

Big Plans Eyed for Downtown

A proposal for a major commercial development on the downtown block facing city hall has been submitted to the city for preliminary consideration, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The project is proposed for the large block bounded by Douglas, Cormorant, Blanshard and Pandora, most of which is now a blacktopped parking lot.

Pollen told reporters at his weekly press conference the proposal envisages a substantial complex including a motel, office accommodation, retail outlets and "a residential component which we very much need."

The development would conform with the city's downtown zoning requirements of a maximum height of 140 feet (14 storeys) and a floor-space-to-land ratio of three to one, he said.

The mayor said the developers, Speed Developments Ltd., had discussed the scheme for several months with aldermen responsible for planning and zoning, and "we have done everything we can to assist and encourage them in the initial stages."

The firm has now reached the stage of submittting plans for city scrutiny prior to an application for a building permit.

Further details of the proposed development were not available today, but it is understood plans call for a tower structure atop a podium.

Due to established development along the Douglas section of the block, including two bank buildings, there would be no frontage on that street.

Pollen said the city had given consideration last year to the idea of acquiring the property as a possible site for a convention centre, but at that time there was no special fund for acquiring strategic parcels of land.

Rowing's a Tough Class For Brentwood Scholars

bill walker

MILL BAY — Gentry Hudson, the public information officer at Brentwood College, was explaining about one youth's determination and pride.

"You see No. 4 there, Joe Morgan," he said as Brentwood rowing coach Tony Carr was putting his senior and lightweight eights through an early morning workout last week, "well, there was some doubt if he would be back with us this year.

"However, he wanted so much to come back and make this crew, he went out and got a summer job just so he could pay his own way. His grandfather thought things were 'too soft' up here."

As Hudson spoke, Morgan was bending to it with other members of the crew who will be going to St. Catherines this week to defend the Canadian Scholastic rowing championship Brentwood won by less than half a length from famed Ridley College last year. Heats are Saturday, finals Sunday.

Now for that "soft" program.

The workout began normally enough (and early enough — 6 a.m.) as Carr intoned through his megaphone:

"Start slowly now, get your rhythm established again."

Then he explained: "We are working on stamina this week. I'll put them back on speed before we leave for the East.

"Keep the blades covered," he cautioned one lad, "right through to the finish now."

Then came one of what were to be several one-minute sprints. "It's coming up — go!"

"This is a younger, meeker, and not as skookum a crew as last year," Carr explained, "but right now it is faster. We've got only three returnees — Dwaine Van Eeuwen, who is at stroke, John Burns and Jim Henniger, and the average age is only 17.

So how does a coach explain a new record for high school crews at Green Lake just a week ago? That's where Brentwood set a new standard of 4:26.4 compared to the old time of 4:29.8.

"It's been a happy surprise to me," said Carr. "I didn't expect it. Last fall when we started our program we were getting hammered. This spring, everything has turned out beautiful.

"It could be," he added, "that I know more, but I think there's more to it than that. I think the boys are working just that much harder to show that last year wasn't just a flash in the pan; and they are determined to do as well as last year's crew."

It's a good thing the crews (the lightweights will go East with the seniors) didn't hear that praise. They might not have believed it. Because out on the water, it was all work. "We have an hour and a half in the morning and an hour in the afternoon," said Carr, "and basically it's run, row and weights."

Then something No. 6 — that would be Mike Wiggins — had done, caught Carr's eye. He mentioned it.

Then another of those killing sprints.

But suddenly a hitch; the seniors were dead in the water. "Something wrong?" asked Carr.

"We can't keep it up, sir. We can get power, but no enthusiasm," explained Van Eeuwen. (It was examination time at the school and there had been several late study nights to go with those early mornings, it was learned later.)

"Well now," said Carr, while allowing a breather, "we'll have to do something about that, won't we?

"It's a terrible thing we have to do this at all, isn't it, and just one week from the Canadian championship? Do you want to finish sixth in the nationals? You will you know."

Then he ordered the final drill. "I'm giving the lightweights a 12-second start, and I want you to catch them. I'll call the 12 seconds."

He did (actually it was closer to 16 seconds) and the seniors snapped to it, caught the other lads, and adjourned for a shower and breakfast. It was 7:30.

Breakfast! Did those lads eat? Cereal, bacon, eggs, toast, juice, milk—"I think the tops is eight eggs," Carr grinned.

It was just four years ago the rowing program got started at Brentwood. In 1971 Carr took a few students with him to the Canadian Henley and happened to remark to Neil Campbell of Ridley that Brentwood was planning to go to the English Henley in 1972.

Campbell replied in effect: "Forget it, save your money, because we'll be there." Some of the Brentwood lads overheard the remark, retold it, and last year at the Canadian Henley surprised everybody — "including us," admitted headmaster Dave Mackenzie.

Later, of course, Ridley turned the tables in England, by three lengths. And this year again will be the crew to beat.

For Brentwood, the motivation is still clear enough. They are the champs. There is no lack of discipline, or pride. Not after that gruelling morning drill. And the rapport between Carr and his crew, through stroke Van Eeuwen, is obvious.

But a soft school?

'Good' Hitter Ties Mark

By The Associated Press

"I thought I was a pretty good hitter," Wayne Twitchell of Philadelphia Phillies said Tuesday night after doing what such renowned sluggers as Willie Stargell, Reggie Jackson, Frank Howard and Pat Seerey didn't. Of course, they didn't really want to.

Neither did Twitchell, a towering right-handed pitcher, who stepped to the plate four times and struck out four times, repeating his performance of May 16. That equalled the major league mark for most strikeouts by a batter in two consecutive games held by several players. Stargell, Jackson, Howard and Seerey all stopped at seven whiffs.

"I really don't want that record, but I'm willing to strike out 50 times a game if I win," said the 6-foot-6, 25-year-old pitcher who scattered 11 hits in beating Pittsburgh Pirates for the second time in a week, this one by a 7-4 score.

Elsewhere, St. Louis Cardinals defeated New York Mets 5-3, Montreal Expos edged Chicago Cubs 4-3 in 11 innings, San Francisco Giants beat Atlanta Braves 7-3, Cincinnati Reds shaded Houston Astros 6-4 and Los Angeles Dodgers turned back San Diego Padres 5-1.

Greg Luzinski and Willie Montanez did the big hitting for the Phillies. Luzinski drove in three runs mith a single and double and Montanez hit a two-run homer.

Rick Wise of St. Louis rapped a two-run double that keyed the Cardinals' five-run seventh inning against the Mets, breaking up a scoreless game.

THIRD HOME RUN

The baseball was enshrined in a plastic case, sitting on a little gold stand in front of Chuck Brinkman's locker. The printing on the ball read: "First major league home run vs. the California Angels' Rudy May."

"Beautiful," exclaimed the Chicago White Sox catcher about the homemade gift from his team-mates. "These guys are really great."

Brinkman's two-run shot helped the White Sox defeat the Angels 6-2 Tuesday night.

"This is a great feeling," said Brinkman, talking about only the third home run of his professional career. He hit one in spring training in 1972 and one in the minor leagues several years ago.

In the other American League games, Cleveland Indians defeated Baltimore Orioles 5-3, Milwaukee Brewers topped Boston Red Sox 4-2, New York Yankees turned back Detroit Tigers 7-2, Minnesota Twins outslugged Kansas City Royals 8-7 and Oakland Athletics whipped Texas Rangers 4-1.

Running Rocks Ready to Face Salmonbellies

If Victoria Shamrocks want to keep the record straight, they will have to beat New Westminster Salmonbellies tonight.

The teams meet at 8 in Memorial Arena in the ninth Western Lacrosse Association game of the season. All of the other eight games have resulted in victories for the home teams.

Vancouver Burrards stopped the improved Coquitlam Adanacs from snapping the run of home-floor wins Tuesday night when they grabbed an 8-5 decision in Vancouver to move back into a first-place tie.

Shamrocks, whose only victory so far was a 15-12 verdict over the Adanacs at home in the league opener, lost both of their away games on the Mainland.

But coach Ed Kowalyk was full of confidence this morning, despite the 16-3 hiding his team took in Vancouver last time out, that the Shamrocks would beat the Salmonbellies tonight.

"They're a tough team and we will have to play good lacrosse," Kowalyk said. "But as long as we keep running and keep the ball out of our zone, we'll do alright."

Kowalyk said he would not play Gord Osinchuk tonight and Tom Somner, who was unavailable, would be out of the lineup.

Jack Kastelein, who played last season for the Shamrocks, would be dressing for the first time, Kowalyk said.

Burrards used a tight-checking defence to hold Adanacs, who had scored a 20-11 victory over Vancouver on their home floor a night earlier.

Three times in the first eight minutes, Coquitlam held one-goal leads, but Dennis Quigley put Burrards ahead to stay with a goal at 15:45 of the first period.

By the end of that period, Burrards had taken a 5-3 lead and after two periods it had been increased to 7-4.

TRAPSHOOTER RUNS 200 STRAIGHT

MINOT, N.D. (AP) — Trapshooter Mark Huff of Minot broke 100 straight targets twice in a row during the weekend in what was believed to be only the second time in United States trapshooting history that the feat was accomplished. Amateur trapshooting manager Hugh McKinley said Monday Morris Steinburg of Thawville, Ill., did it three years ago.

Dicker-Martens Drop Butlers

Two home runs by Bob Nordal and one by Vern Humphries set the pace as Dicker-Martens slammed Butler Brothers 13-7 in a Commercial Men's Softball League game Tuesday night at Macdonald Park.

Ingraham Hotel tripped Royal Trust 5-4 in the other game.

Imlach's Attack Only Flu

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach, vice-president and general manager of Buffalo Sabres, is in hospital because of flu, and not a heart attack, team officials said Tuesday.

The national Hockey League club said in a statement that Imlach showed no signs of "cardiac complications" and would be released from hospital Thursday.

He was admitted to hospital after complaining of stomach pains and "general achiness."

Imlach suffered a severe heart attack during the 1971-72 NHL season forcing him to give up the coaching part of his job. He recently was rehired as general manager with the vice-president's title added.

Blazer Deal Final

(Times News Services)

Vancouver businessman Jim Pattison announced Tuesday that he has completed the purchase of the franchise and player contracts of Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association from the Philadelphia World Hockey Club Inc. for $1.9 million cash.

Purchase of the WHA club, which has been renamed Vancouver Blazers, was announced last week. Pattison said the formal transfer of ownership took place Monday.

At the same time, Pattison said the new WHA entry has already received more than 3,000 applications for season tickets.

At the same time, it was reported in Woodstock, Ont., that Colin Campbell of Peterborough Petes, Blazers' first-round choice in the WHA drafted, has signed with Vancouver. Campbell was a second-round choice of the NHL's Pittsburgh Penguins.

IN HOCKEY

Meanwhile, National League teams continue to waste no time in signing draft choices from the Western Canada League.

Detroit Red Wings signed three — defenceman Mike Korney and winger Blair Stewart of the Winnipeg Jets, and centre-winger Dennis Polonich of Flin Flon Bombers.

Chicago Black Hawks landed their No. 1 pick, left winger Darcy Rota of Edmonton Oil Kings. The 20-year-old Rota signed a "multi-year" pact.

In Halifax, Howie Meeker called on Canadian citizens to insist that the NHL champion Montreal Canadiens play one of the two top Soviet hockey teams which will visit North America in November and December.

The Canadiens, along with Toronto Maple Leafs and Vancouver Canucks, have indicated that they are not interested in meeting the Russians.

Meeker said he hates to think of the Russians playing some of the "humpty-dumpty" NHL expansion teams.

Czechoslovakia's national hockey team coaches, Jaroslav Pittner and Vladimir Koska, have resigned, say reports published in Prague newspapers.

The two men, who together led the Czechoslovak national team for six years, had announced their intention to retire several months ago, before this year's world championships in Moscow where the Czechs finished third behind the Soviet Union and Sweden.

Both said earlier that the pressure of both coaching jobs was too great and that they would retire for reasons of health.

Bell's Strike Early for Win

Bell's Men's Wear struck early and came away with a 6-2 victory over Mike's Sport Shop in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League encounter Tuesday night at Central Park.

In the other game, Century Inn downed CFB Esquimalt 6-2 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Bell's scored three runs in the first inning and two in the second en route to the victory, which broke up a three-way tie for first place.

Jack Lusk led Bell batters with three hits on four trips to the plate, scoring once and driving in three runs. Catcher Jim Wilson, who finished two for four, bashed out a two-run homer in the first.

Century's John Hughes paced the attack with three doubles on four trips to score twice and drive in one run. Clubmate Gord Rutherford turned in a triple, double and a single in four turns at bat.

Farmers Rally To Defeat Al's

Farmer Construction squeezed three runs out of a pair of singles Tuesday night to defeat Al's Home Service 3-1 in a Victoria Senior Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Trailing by one run, Farmers began a rally in the sixth inning with back-to-back singles by Mike Baier and Glen Campbell.

Perrault Wins Lady Byng Award

MONTREAL (CP)—Gilbert Perreault, Buffalo Sabres' nifty centre, collected his second trophy in three National Hockey League seasons Tuesday, as he was named winner of the Lady Byng Trophy for 1972-73.

The Lady Byng award goes annually to the player best combining sportmanship and high standard of playing ability. By winning the trophy, Perreault also became the first player of a post-1967 NHL club to win two individual awards. He previously won the Calder Trophy as the league's rookie-of-the-year in 1970-71.

Jean Ratelle, who won the Lady Byng award last season, was runner-up to Perreault in this year's balloting while veteran left winger John Buyck of Boston Bruins was third.

Perreault, 22, collected 118 points in the voting among members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association (PHWA) in 16 NHL cities. Ratelle had 94 points and Buyck 53.

The points were awarded on the basis of five for a first-place choice, three for a second and one for a third.

Perreault, who will receive $1,500 as the winner of the award, had his best season in the NHL in 1972-73.

The smooth-skating native of Victoriaville, Que., had 28 goals and 60 assists and only had 10 minutes in penalties during the season. He combined with left winger Rick Martin and right winger Rene Robert to form The French Connection and it was the forward line that was a key cog in Buffalo's drive to a fourth-place finish in the NHL's East Division.

Perreault's selection continues a trend of recent years whereby seven of the last eight winners of the Lady Byng have been centres. Only Bucyk, who won the trophy in 1970-71, played a position other than centre.

Perreault is also only the second active player to win both the Calder and Byng trophies. The other is Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs who won the Calder Trophy in 1960-61 and the Byng twice—in 1961-62 and 1962-63.

Ratelle will get $750 for his second-place finish in the voting, which saw a record total of 26 players receive votes.

Here's One Tourney Wakeham Hasn't Won

All the talent heads for Cedar Hill next weekend in an effort to claim what each figures will be his fair share from the $6,700 pot the Labatts Open has to offer.

The field includes 190 amateurs and 35 professionals, representing 40 clubs, who are expected to make it off the first tee in seven hours, 37 minutes. It may stretch over eight hours even though fore-caddies and marshals will be assigned in strategic locations to prevent it from becoming a route march.

It's Vancouver Island's largest, and second only to the B.C. Open in the province.

The rush was so great, tournament planners had to lop 55 amateurs. Among those who made it, the talent is such that Bill Wakeham's job won't be any easier.

From top to bottom, the Cowichan pro has managed, at one time or another, to come home first in virtually every tournament in the province. Except one. The Cedar Hill tournament is one that Wakeham has never won.

Bobby Cox, Lyle Crawford, Joe Jeroski, Doug Robb, Ron Willey, Al Zimmerman, Doug Reid, Finn Sorenson and Al Kennedy are some of the better-known pros entered along with the flock of outstanding amateurs headed by Canadian champion Doug Roxburgh.

Host pro Bill Goldsworthy figures a two-round total of about six-under-par should take it, and he strongly suspects this may be the year the course record of 60 may be broken.

Zimmerman is one who has shown he likes the track. Not getting younger, but sharper, the 64-year-old pro hit the course with a three-under 62 about two weeks ago and last week came in with a 60 in a practice round.

SHORT CHIPS: While they put on a rush to get into the Cedar Hill Open, district amateurs haven't displayed the same enthusiasm towards the City Amateur . . . At last count, only about 50 amateurs were entered for the June 3 and 10 tests . . . Ron Cush, an unattached pro who plays out of Cedar Hill, picked up $300 as low pro in the Malaspina Open at Powell River at the weekend . . . Overall honors went to amateur Blake Cramb of Powell River, who defeated Cush with a par on the first playoff hole . . .

Another runnerup was Don Wilson of Colwood . . . He bowed to John Ryan of Capilano in the Parksville Lions' match-play tournament at Qualicum Beach . . . Phyllis Frazier of Marine Drive defeated Betty McIntosh of Point Grey in an all-Vancouver ladies' final . . . and former Victoria Bill Hobbis, now living in Prince George, won the Jubilee Open at Prince Rupert by 11 strokes with a 54-hole total of 214.

Bill Greatrex and Butch Reimer of Beach Grove defeated Brian Russell and Tracy Moore of Point Grey, 4 and 2, while Tom Moryson and Gord Fairburn downed Vine Baker and Gord McKenzie, also of Point Grey, 2 and 1, in Sunday's Vancouver match-play semi-finals . . . Nanaimo's Dick Baker carded a three-over-par 75 to beat out Cowichan's Laurie Peet by one stroke in the zone six junior tournament at Nanaimo on Monday . . . Uplands' Tracy Ware, scoring a net 66, edged Nanaimo's Murray Anderson for handicap honors . . . Oak Bay's Bert Osborough scored his second ace this year by holing out on Victoria's eighth . . . And a hole-in-one by Freda Bond, on the 17th, was the first ace recorded by a woman at Glen Meadows . . . 17 also was Dean Archer's lucky number . . . He counted his ace Monday at Cedar Hill . . . Doug Mahovlic has replaced Mike Metcalfe as the assistant in Earl Davies' Gorge Vale pro shop . . . Mike will stay on at Gorge Vale as a playing member . . . Wakeham and Glen Meadowns' Dick Silverberg are both entered in the Payless Classic at Eugene, Ore., starting next week . . .

Inter-Gender Joust Fad Expands

Now he has female tennis stars lining up to take him on and the idea of inter-gender jousts is fast spreading to golf and track.

Buoyed by his 6-2, 6-1 Mother's Day victory over Margaret Court, worth $12,500, the 55-year-old Californian signed Thursday for a $50,000 winner-take-all match against 18-year-old Chris Evert Sept. 22.

And champing at the bit is Billie Jean King, leading women's liberationist of the sports world who spurned his initial attempt to woo her to the courts.

"The women's lib movement in tennis is working quickly to match me with someone who might be tougher than Mrs. Court," Riggs said before the pact was signed here Thursday.

"Chris would be the toughest."

Such a statement about Miss Evert, top money winner on the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association pro tour this year with more than $40,000, was just enough to bait Mrs. King, a member of the rival Virginia Slims circuit which Mrs. Court dominated with 10 triumphs worth $82,000.

So she offered to ante up $5,000 of her own money, matched by the Hilton Head, S.C., Racket Club, for a $10,000 winner-take-all duel.

"There was no point in this in the beginning, but now I think there is since Margaret really got waxed," said Mrs. King, the defending Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion who became the first sportswoman to win more than $100,000 in a single season.

"I feel I've got something to prove now. I think I really owe it to my fans and to women's tennis. I think I can beat him."

Not all women have reason for such confidence.

Three years ago, Carol Mann, leading money winner on the Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour in 1969 with nearly $50,000 and eight triumphs, did head-to-head battle with Doug Sanders.

Miss Mann fell apart amid all the publicity and pressure and was soundly beaten when Sanders shot a 73 to her 85.

"I felt that I let the women down," said Miss Mann. "I can't remember when I last shot an 85."

Kathy Whitworth, 32, the all-time leading LPGA money winner and two-time winner on the tour so far this season, may get a chance to redeem the reputation of women's golf.

In a craze that might be unequalled since college kids started eating live goldfish, Jimmy Demaret challenged her last meek to an 18-hole winner-take-all golf match.

Demaret, 60, a three-time winner of the Masters who now is co-owner of Houston's Champions Golf Club, said the challenge "seems to be the thing to do these days."

"If they want to make it a foursome, I'll take 62-year-old Sam Snead for my partner," he added.

But he had better check the records first.

The late woman golfer Babe Didrikson Zaharias beat Snead, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and a host of other pros in their heyday. In the pro-am event of the 1943 Phoenix Open, Babe shot a 67, the day's best round.

Wyomia Tyus Simburg chalked up one for the ladies when she defeated George Rhoden in a challenge 60-yard dash. Rhoden, 47, who won an Olympic gold medal at 400 metres in 1952, broke in front but lost by a stride to Mrs. Simburg, gold medal winner at the 1964 and 1968 Olympics.

Bowler Records Cricket Rarity

A combined Castaways-Incogs team retained the Chris Rowe Shield when the annual two-day cricket tournament ended Monday at Beacon Hill Park but rival bowler Bob McKay stole the individual glory.

Matches in the four-team, round-robin tournament were restricted to 24 overs an innings and Castaways-Incogs finished with a 3-0 win-loss record.

Windsor Park, a combined Oak Bay and Alcos side, had two wins and one loss to finish second, Simon Fraser University was third with a 1-2 record and an Albion XI had three losses.

Bowling for Windsor Park, McKay took eight wickets for only 15 runs, including a rare hat-trick, as his team got SFU all out for 57 runs. Windsor Park scored 58 for the loss of six wickets to win the match.

McKay then took seven wickets for 22 runs as Windsor Park dismissed Albion for 56 runs to give him a tournament total of 15 wickets for 37.

Young Peter Nation, who hit a sparkling 55 including five sixes for the tourney's top batting performance, led Windsor Park to a total of 134 for seven when the combined side batted first against Albion.

Castaways-Incogs got 27 runs from Dave Shaw and 22 not out from Nick Walton to score 97 for six and then Walton took four for 39 and Jim Wenman got three for 25 to get Windsor Park all out for 77.

Walton hit 40, Mike Walsh scored 33 and Shaw got 31 as Castaways-Incogs reached 158 for five and then Dave Auld took three for eight as the combined side got eight SFU batsmen out for 66 runs.

Captain Mal Shanks hit a fine 47 runs but his Albion team was all out for 79 and SFU scored 86 for the victory.

North Stars Get Stanfield; Johnston Dealt to Toronto

BOSTON (AP) — Three National Hockey League players changed clubs Monday as the result of two deals by Boston Bruins.

Bruins moved to solve their goalkeeping problems by obtaining Gilles Gilbert, 24, from Minnesota North Stars. In exchange, the Bruins gave up Fred Stanfield, 30-year-old centre who has been a consistent NHL performer for six seasons.

Stanfield has never had fewer than 20 goals in any of his six seasons with the Bruins, and his point production for the past three seasons has been 78, 79 and 76. Gilbert appeared in 22 games this past season, and had a 3.05 goals-against average.

Gilbert is expected to take over as the regular-goalkeeper, the Bruins having lost veteran Jacques Plante to the World Hockey Association and veteran Ed Johnston in the deal to get Plante.

Toronto Maple Leafs confirmed Monday that they had taken Johnston to complete the deal for Plante. A Toronto spokesman said the 39-year-old Johnston was taken from a list of "three or four" Boston players.

Wren Blair, general-manager of the North Stars, said that Gilbert had been set to sign with Los Angeles Sharks of the WHA and that the North Stars "just couldn't match it in our setup."

Harry Sinden, managing-director of the Bruins, said later that Gilbert had been signed to a multi-year contract. Gilbert said it was for six years, and that it included a no-trade clause.

New Hockey Territories

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Northwest Territories was accepted as an affiliate of the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association during the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) here Tuesday.

In addition, the convention approved a recommendation from the rules committee that any player who spits at a referee or a linesman will be subject to a match penalty.

Ray Goulet of Yellowknife, recreation officer for the territorial government, said there were 1,000 boys playing minor hockey and at least 200 players at intermediate and senior levels in his area.

"I am sure we will be a credit to the CAHA."

"It's expensive operating hockey in the Northwest Territories," Goulet said, "because of the vast area we cover.

"From Inuvik to Yellowknife, for example, is 1,800 miles. We have a lot of flying involved and this costs a lot of money."

SYSTEM MATURES

Goulet said the Northwest Territories conducts house leagues, but has reached the point that "we want to compete at the national level."

Goulet said seven graduates from the Territories have already been chosen by Major Junior A and minor professional hockey teams.

"It is not our intention to breed professionals, but after our territorial champions are declared, the boys are at a dead end."

"We think it is only fair that they should have a chance to challenge the teams in the established branches."

The CAHA also approved use of a stick gauge designed by Tom Lawson of Ottawa. The device, for measuring curvature and length of hockey stick blades, is said to be superior to those used in the National Hockey League.

A referees' clinic will be held in Winnipeg Sept. 28-30, the meeting decided.

The CAHA outlawed overseas tours by minor hockey groups unless arranged or approved by the association. Gordon Juckes of Ottawa, executive director, had said the problem of overseas hockey tours" is rapidly becoming a "hopeless mess."

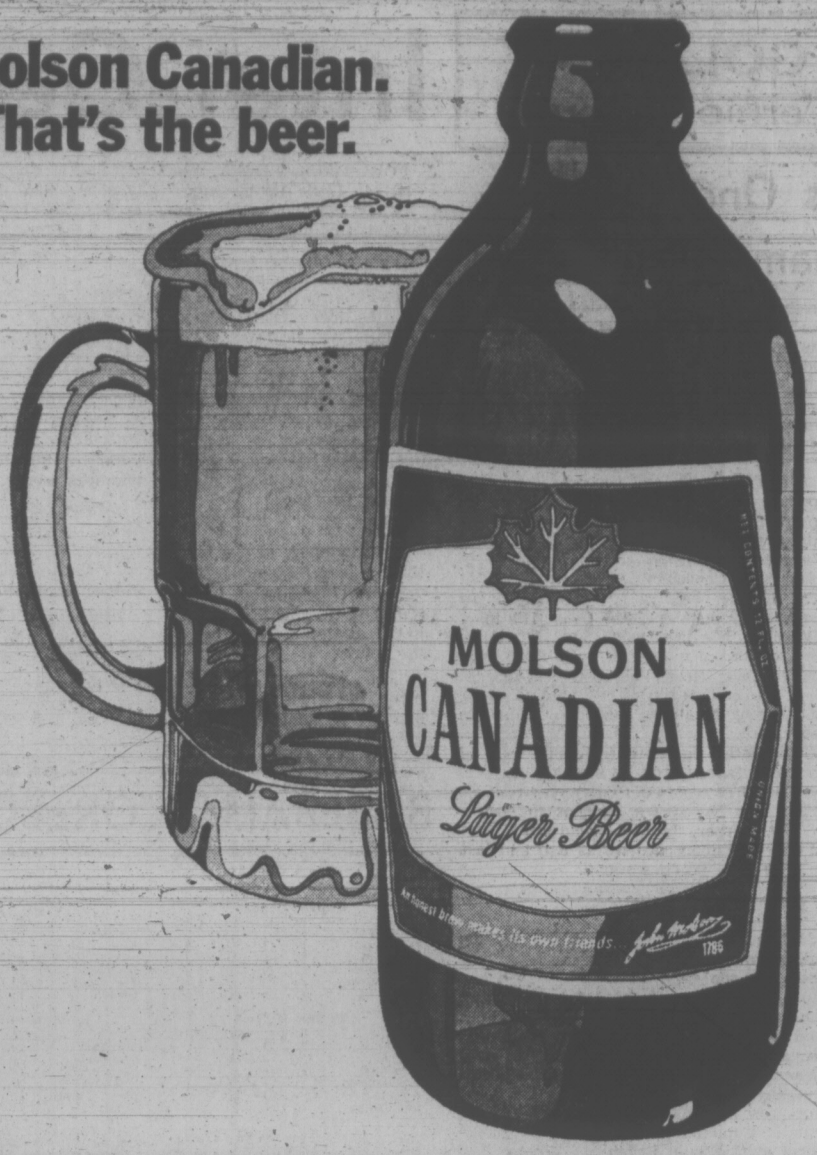

"We have everybody from travel agents to uncles and aunts with relatives in European countries setting up these tours."

Juckes said high school teams are one of the biggest offenders and the CAHA can do little about it because those teams are not under CAHA jurisdiction.

Romania Rallies For Tennis Win

By The Associated Press

Romania, last year's runner-up to the United States in the Davis Cup tennis final, came from behind Sunday to defeat the Netherlands 3-2 and win its quarter-final match in European Zone A play.

New Zealand, the Soviet Union, and France also reached the semi-finals in European Zone A while Italy, West Germany and Spain gained semi-final berths in European Zone B ccompetition.

With Romania and the Netherlands tied 2-2, U.S. Open champion Ilie Nastase defeated Dutchman Tom Okker 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 to give his country the victory. Earlier in the day, Romania's Thoma Ovics had beaten Nick Fleury 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 to set up the crucial fifth match.

West Germany completed a 4-1 rout of England as Juergen Fassbender took Roger Taylor 6-4, 8-6, 6-3 after Englishman Mark Cox had gained his country's only point, 4-6, 6-0, 6-4, 6-2 over Karl Meller.

The semi-final pairings for European Zone A will be Romania and New Zealand and the USSR and France.

In European Zone B, the matchups are: Italy and Spain and West Germany against the winner of an Egypt-Czechoslovakia series.

Player Back on Tour

ATLANTA (AP) — Gary Player of South Africa, for more than a decade one of the world's leading golfers, makes his long delayed 1973 United States start this week in the $150,000 Atlanta Classic.

Player, the 1972 U.S. PGA champion and one of only four men to sweep the world's major titles, has been sidelined most of the year by a series of health problems.

But he'll be in the 144-man field and, as always, ranks as one of the top contenders for the Thursday start of the 72-hole test over the hilliest, hardest-walking layout the touring pros play all season, the 6,685-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course.

Player originally had been scheduled to start his American swing in Florida. But that was delayed by a couple of operations. He had a cyst removed from his leg, and he had to have major surgery to correct some problems with his bladder.

He missed the Masters for the first time in 17 years.

SHOOTS FOR $1 MILLION

Now he's seeking to become the first foreign player to pass the $1 million mark in career earnings on the U.S. tour. He's won more than $100,000 in each of the last four seasons and needs only $65,000 to pass the million mark.

"I feel good," Player said "I'm very glad I'm a non-smoker and have taken care of my body."

While Player will draw much of the gallery attention, after two practice rounds, the favorite's role goes to Jack Nicklaus.

Nicklaus scored his third victory of the season in his last previous start five weeks ago, and he's looking for a chance to regain the leading money winning sot.

Bruce Crampton of Australia, who is idle this week, has $163,000. Nicklaus, with $146,000, could regain the lead with a victory, worth $30,000.

B.C. Darts Meet Here

B.C. darts championship will be held in the auditorium of the Britannia Branch of the Canadian Legion on Saturday and Sunday.

Twenty teams, including entries from Comox, Campbell River and Victoria on the Island, will compete in the team and individual events.

Play will commence Saturday at 11 a.m. Finals will be held Sunday at 1 p.m. with Major General George Pearkes presenting the festival of sports awards at 4 p.m.

Chiefs Sign Holmes

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League have signed Pat Holmes, former Houston Oiler, as a free agent. Holmes, a defensive end, was a regular for the Oilers for seven seasons, He played four seasons with Calgary Stempeders of the Canadian Football League.

Al's Happy But Ready To Listen

HALIFAX (CP) — Al MacNeil, coach and general manager of Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League, says he is happy in the Montreal Canadiens organization but is open to offers.

"I am happy . . . but I could be happier, and if any offers come my way, I will listen to what they have to say," MacNeil said in an interview.

MacNeil piloted the Voyageurs to the Calder Cup last season but lost out to the Cincinnati Swords this year.

He says reports that he is being considered for a coaching job with Chicago Black Hawks are news to him.

Stockers Use Homer Power

Three players hit home runs Tuesday night to power Stockers North Americans to a 14-6 win over Moose Lodge Loyals.

In an earlier game, Cosmos trounced B.C. Tel 10-1.

Toronto Awarded Franchise In New Pro Tennis League

CHICAGO (CP) — A professional tennis league, including a Toronto franchise, was formed Tuesday and George MacCall, non-playing captain of three United States Davis Cup teams, was named commissioner.

The new league, World Team Tennis, will have franchises in 15 U.S. cities plus Toronto. The concept of the league is based on team play with men and women on the rosters of each squad. Play is scheduled to start next year.

John F. Bassett and John C. Eaton were named as principal owners of the Toronto franchise. Both are members of a group which earlier this month acquired the Ottawa franchise in the World Hockey Association and announced they would move it to Toronto.

Dennis Murphy of Fullerton, Calif., president of Los Angeles Sharks of the WHA, is president of World Team Tennis.

The promoters said the league season will run from May to July with all matches indoors.

The timing of the season, league officials said, will minimize conflict with existing professional tennis tournaments and will enable top players to join WTT. The owners also plan a schedule break to allow WTT players to compete at Wimbledon.

WTT officials said the teams will be aligned in two divisions of eight teams each or three divisions of six teams pending the addition of two more franchises.

The 15 U.S. franchises as of the moment are in Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Denver, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, Minnesota, New York, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, San Diego, San Francisco.

MISREPRESENTATION BACKFIRES

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sam Posey's Eagle-Offenhauser was disqualified Tuesday as first alternate for the May 28 Indianapolis 500-mile race.

The disqualification was announced by the United States Auto Club after it fined the team for "attempts at misrepresentation." The action moved rookie Tom Bigelow's Vollstedt-Offy into the first alternate position.

Dick King, USAC director of competition, fined the team $1,000 and ordered it to post $5,000 bond against any "further attempt at misrepresentation the rest of the season."

Chief mechanic Jack McCormick was placed on probation one year and fined $250.

King said the evidence was conclusive that the team attempted to pass off car No. 34, which was qualified by Posey May 13, as car No. 31 — a purported new car. King said the team tried to transfer serial numbers and decals to make No. 34 appear to be the new car.

Car 34, the qualified Eagle-Offy, became the first alternate when it was the last car bumped at the close of trials Sunday.

Ike MacKay Has an Idea For 'Soccer Experience'

Ike MacKay is back in town and once again he is bursting with soccer ideas.

MacKay, former playing-coach of the University of Victoria Vikings and well-known as one of the Island's leading players, is home for a break from the University of Alberta in Edmonton, where he is studying.

"Upset" about the demise of summer soccer — the B.C. Premier League has so far failed to get off the ground after being suspended last year — MacKay plans to hold a free clinic for young players.

The clinic, open to anyone interested in soccer in the Greater Victoria area, will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6 at Windsor Park starting May 29 and running until Aug. 16.

MacKay says his clinic, which he prefers to call a "soccer experience," is mainly aimed at players between 15 and 21 as, without a summer soccer league, "there isn't too much on right now for this age group." But, he says, "we won't turn anyone older or younger away."

After getting experience in running several other paying clinics here, MacKay says his free clinic is an alternative to an organized program with the main emphasis on participation and on having fun.

"I want to attract talented players, of course," MacKay said Tuesday. "But I am also interested in getting guys who have never played before."

There will be teams formed and practice games played each night until dark and then soccer films will be shown in the Windsor Park Pavillion.

Interested? Then just show up. Extra information can be got from MacKay at 598-5793.

Three City Players Earn All-Star Spots

SURREY — Teams from the Victoria YM-YWCA placed third and sixth in an intermediate girls' (14-and-under) volleyball tournament, which ended here Sunday.

Victoria Y Reds finished in a second-place tie with de Sales Reps of Burnaby, both with 11-3 win-loss records, but the Burnaby squad took second place on the basis of fewer points scored against it.

B.C. Olympics of Surrey won the eight-team tourney with a 14-0 record and Spruce City of Prince George was fourth with a 7-7 mark.

Jacque Bryan of the Victoria Y Reds was named the tourney's most-valuable player and she and teammate Shelley Godfrey, along with Darlene Leung of the sixth-place Y Whites, were named to the all-star squad.

Richman Nets Three

Owen Richman scored three times Tuesday night to help London Boxing Club down Nanaimo City 11-4 in a Vancouver Island Senior "C" Lacrosse League game at Memorial Arena.

Davis Describes Death Threats

Special to The Times

TORONTO — A tight security ring was thrown around the provincial legislature last month following a death threat against Premier Davis and members of the House, it was revealed Tuesday.

The threat, which Premier Davis described in an emotional address to the House, was made April 12 minutes before Provincial Treasurer John White was due to deliver his budget speech to the House.

Premier Davis, who gave details of the budget day security threat following a series of gruelling questions from Opposition ranks about personal trips he has taken on government aircraft for apparent security reasons, said last month's threat was "obviously from a crank."

He said that his security men were advised of the budget day threat by Metro Toronto police about 15 minutes before provincial treasurer was due to address the packed legislature.

"Police had received obviously an anonymous phone call, obviously from a crank, that they were coming up to the buildings to kill the premier and to do something to the members of the House," said Davis.

"But if the leader of the opposition and the leader of the New Democratic Party think it is particularly comfortable for basically one person to assume this responsibility," continued the premier," to sit here in his seat in the House while the treasurer is delivering an excellent address and at the same time sort of casually looking around the galleries wondering whether or not it was a crank, I would say it is not that simple."

Opposition benches have been maintaining that the question of security was introduced several weeks ago by Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier as a "smoke screen" to take the heat off the controversial Davis "Air Force."

The premier and senior cabinet ministers have been accused of misusing the 40 government planes for non-government business and as easy conveniences to their home constituencies.

The premier, who admitted frankly late last week and again Tuesday that he and his family do take personal flights on government planes, said he has kept an accounting of all those trips and intends to pay for every one of them.

He said he has been advised to avoid using commercial airlines for security reasons and when he does take a government plane on non-government business, sets aside funds equivlent to a first-class seat for both he and his wife. The equivalent of economy fares are set aside when his children fly he said.

Soviet Union Bans Travel

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities have started an unexplained ban on travel by foreigners based in Moscow. Under it, such foreigners may not go farther than 25 miles beyond the Moscow city limits without getting approval from the foreign ministry 48 hours in advance. There was speculation that large-scale military manoeuvres prompted the restriction, and that it would be temporary.

CANADA'S CUP OF TEA

Canada Cup Reserve is a new 6 year old Canadian whisky.

It is made by Canadian Schenley.

Over the last 28 years Schenley has built a reputation on quality. So Schenley puts its name on the line every time that name goes on a bottle.

To simply call Canada Cup Reserve "Canadian" isn't enough for Schenley. It must measure up to their standards of a Canadian whisky. Smoothness, lightness and a rich Canadian taste.

Under the supervision of Schenley's master distiller, over 12 different blends were developed and put through extensive taste tests. Only 6 years-aged whiskies from hand charred white oak casks were tested.

Only men skilled in the distilling art made the decisions. This wasn't a popularity contest but a careful search for supreme quality. Schenley Canadian Quality.

Finally a blend was chosen, one that could truly bear the name — Canada Cup.

Try new Canada Cup Reserve. Sip it slowly as a taster would.

CLOWN TURNS UP

Gavin Rhodes, of Black Prince Catering, called the association's secretary Gerry Parker when he read a story in Tuesday's Times describing the anonymous winners.

Rhodes was the clown in white who won first prize in the clown category for 16 years of age and over in Monday's parade. When he called the association he is reported to have said "I'm your flower nymph."

The association is still looking for the second and third place winners — a clown with music on his back and a clown with a striped costume and a hat with a cup on top.

Wiretap Bill Opposed

Proposed federal legislation against wiretapping and electronic eavesdropping will provide more protection for the criminal, Victoria police chief Jack Gregory said Tuesday.

"I feel the bill in its present form is so restrictive as to provide the criminal with greater protection," he said.

The criminal "will know it will take police much longer to launch necessary technical and legal details before becoming operational.

"Once a warrant has been granted and surveillance set up, these details provide him with a basis for acquittal and render valuable evidence inadmissable," he said.

He emphasized, however, that the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police fully supports "the need to control electronic eavesdropping and wiretapping." Gregory heads the association's law amendments committee.

The chief made his comments before leaving for the two-day annual meeting in Medicine Hat of the Western Police Chiefs Association where the bill—scheduled to go through Canada's parliament soon—should be one of the discussion topics.

Gregory and other members of the chiefs' association appeared last June before a Commons committee urging the easing of restrictions on police surveillance.

But the only change is that final warrant authorization can be made by a county court judge rather than a supreme court judge.

And "that doesn't relieve the situation at all," Gregory said. "Victoria has one county court judge and there are legal holidays in the summer. Some places have no country court judges at all."

Protection of Privacy Act controls are "to stringent in that they require too much detail before a request for a warrant can be submitted," he said.

Victoria Students Top Fair

Projects by Cheryl Redford, 13, of 2084 Quimper, and Caleb Small, 13, of 832 Gonzales, were judged best of 101 entries in the junior engineering section of the fair, a project of the Youth Science Foundation.

Cheryl, a Grade 7 student at Margaret Jenkins Elementary, won first prize of $75 for a study demonstrating the tensile strength of dyed and bleached hair.

She also won the Northern Bell research prize of $200 and a four-day trip to the Bell Research laboratory in Ottawa later this year.

Caleb, a Grade 8 student at Oak Bay Junior Secondary, won second place with a new and cheaper method of storing data in a computer. His project was called Original (pure) Research in Computer Memory Bank Design.

'Blast' Out A Port

Panhandle . . . An Obstacle to B.C. Development

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

British Columbia could get its own deepwater port in the northwest corner of the province — but it would take an atomic bomb to do it.

At the present time all seaports in the northern half of British Columbia are in the Alaska Panhandle and all Canadian resources must go through U.S. territory for export.

However, British Columbia mining officials are hopeful that the Tar Inlet area could become a Canadian seaport.

The inlet stretches through Alaska into British Columbia — but it is blocked by a wall of ice known as the Grand Pacific Glacier.

During the 1950s the glacier melted to a point which exposed land on the British Columbia side of the boundary — but the ice has advanced in recent years and it would take an explosion on the order of an atomic bomb to dislodge it.

Tar Inlet is located at the northern point of Glacier Bay and is about 150 miles north of Juneau, Alaska, and 500 miles north of Prince Rupert.

Theoretically Tar Inlet could serve as a seaport for a vast area in B.C. and the Yukon, but B.C. scientists feel it would not be worth the effort.

The Grand Pacific Glacier is a mile-and-a-half wide and up to 35 miles long. It would take a powerful A-blast to melt it and probably subsequent explosions to keep the ice from advancing again.

COSTLY

A railroad or highway could be constructed from the Tar Inlet through the Chilkat Pass and following the Alsek River Valley into the Yukon but it would be a costly undertaking.

The nearby American port of Skagway is developed and more attractive as an exporting area for Canadian goods, if the political problems could be resolved.

If a Canadian port is thought desirable, Tar Inlet offers the only possibility in the top 500 miles of the British Columbia coast and the geographic obstacles are described as "somewhat sticky."

One of the fears of the B.C. scientists who have studied the glacier is that it would advance quickly and wipe out any settlement constructed on the Tar Inlet.

The Alaska Panhandle is a tremendous obstacle to development of the northwest corner of British Columbia but the United States is not interested in giving up a single inch of it, provincial Mines Minister Leo Nimsick said Tuesday.

He was commenting on a statement made earlier Tuesday by a Vancouver Mining official that the B.C. government should seek to take over the Panhandle.

New Taku Mines Ltd. president J. D. Mason said costs of developing Tulsequah gold mine are increased "at least 30 per cent" because of customs duties.

The Tulsequah mine is located on the Taku River which flows through the U.S. Panhandle and empties near Juneau, Alaska.

Nimsick says his department had not fully explored the question, mainly because up to this point it has not been a serious problem.

Future development, however, might be seriously impeded by the Panhandle, which dominates the coastline for the upper half of the province.

Nimsick said he expected the Panhandle question would be raised in talks between himself and mining company officers.

The Tulsequah mine produced gold until 1952 when it was closed.

Reserves of gold at the mine are relatively small, but the mine is an attractive proposition because shafting work has already been done, a mill is located on the property and the price of gold is high.

The mill was kept in operating condition until 1970 by Cominco Ltd. which leased it for their own gold-copper-silver mine located three miles away.

Mason said operating through the Alaska Panhandle produced a large number of irritations for New Taku.

The Problems:

—Equipment imported through American territory from Canada might be subject to U.S. duties.

—Forms have to be filled out in triplicate to buy a loaf of bread and transport it to the mine site.

—Planes flying from Alaska to explore mines in the Tulsequah area can only make one landing on the Canadian side and then must return to Alaska. To explore B.C. property by air, planes must be brought in from Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, at four times the cost of renting planes at Juneau.

—Sales to ports in the southern United States would run afoul of the Jones Act which requires that goods shipped between two U.S. ports must be shipped on expensive American bottoms.

This means that a Canadian mine shipping Canadian ore to a U.S. customer would have to use a U.S. vessel. This is a more serious problem for timber development in the area but could also hinder mineral export.

"The existence of the Panhandle is frustrating and expensive for British Columbians trying to develop the northwestern section of the province," Mason said.

"It is an ancher around our necks."

The Panhandle was part of the U.S. purchase of Alaska in 1867 when the Americans paid Russia $7.2 million for the territory.

In 1825 Britain and Russia had agreed to a division of North America based upon exploration, with Alaska being granted to Russia.

The Panhandle boundary line was the subject of a Canada-U.S. arbitration case in 1903 with the Americans winning their claim that the line should be drawn joining the crests of the coastal mountain range.

Language Corps Formed

QUEBEC (CP) — University students will be used to teach a second language in high schools under a federal-provincial program announced Tuesday by Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner.

Faulkner told the Canadian School Trustees' Association that the program, entitled Linguistic Volunteer Corps, will allow exchange of about 200 university students to teach in high schools beginning this fall.

University students from a French-speaking area will be invited to apply for positions in an English-speaking area, and vice-versa, he said.

"Those students will attend university in the host region and will spend six or seven hours a week with language classes in high schools associated with the plan, helping the students with comprehension and pronunciation of the second language."

Faulkner said the program, federally funded but to be administered by the province, has the "potential both of improvement of language instruction and for real deepening of cross-Canada understanding."

He said the federal government has begun discussions with the provinces on a book exchange, whereby publications in both official languages will be made available through public libraries.

The minister also said that studies now are under way to make language training more available, especially for adults who consider present programs ineffective.

Brewery Blaze

WARRINGTON, England (AP) — Fire badly damaged Europe's biggest brewery Sunday night before the $50-million plant started production. More than 80 firemen using 20 pumps fought the blaze for more than three hours. The brewery was to have employed 1,000 workers.

U.K. ORDERS SPENDING CUT

LONDON (AP) — The British government ordered cuts of 600 million pounds (or $1.5 billion) in its public spending programs to help fight inflation.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber announced the cuts in the House little more than two months after he ordered the biggest budget deficit in Britian's peacetime history — 4.4 billion pounds (or $11 billion) for the coming financial year.

The budget, announced May 6, was supposed to be neutral.

Tax cuts would have spurred inflation. Tax increases would have curbed growth. So Barber kept taxes even and announced the huge deficit.

The deficit spending, however, also proved a stimulant to Britain's overheating economy.

Latest figures show inflation rising at a rate of 9.2 per cent a year despite curbs on wages and some prices.

ICCS Costly Affair

By JAMES ANDERSON
Times Correspondent

SAIGON — Forty million dollars . . . sixty million dollars . . . nobody seems to really know.

But the International Commission of Control and Supervision is turning out to be a costly affair

Commission officials are struggling to prepare a budget and wary of talking about specifics while most of their contracts are still in the bidding stages.

But there are a lot of unpaid bills and the commission sent a plea last month for more money from the four signatories of the Paris peace agreement, the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

The four have already provided nearly $4 million to the commission, which is almost all spent.

The commission is still waiting for answers to its request for additional funds, but the U.S. government is reportedly sweeping out odd corners of its state department budget for unspent money it can advance to the ICCS.

Michel Gauvin, the head of the Canadian delegation, says jestingly that the commission is "going smiling into bankruptcy."

And the Saigon government, to the distress of the U.S. embassy, has been trying to add to the commission's costs by seeking a windfall in taxes from the contractors who provide many of the ICCS services.

Budget estimates are largely a matter of guesswork at this stage, according to the officials working on the complicated paperwork.

'BALLPARK' FIGURE

But several people indicate that $60 million a year is a very rough "ballpark figure" for the costs of the truce supervision force of fewer than 1,200 Canadains, Hungarians, Poles and Indonesians.

It is a lot cheaper than war.

But that estimate would work out to something like $500,000 a year for each peacekeeper, without including the salaries and allowances being paid by the ICCS countries themselves.

And it means that Canada's two-per-cent contribution to the ICCS kitty, if Ottawa extends its commitment at the end of May, might cost more than $1 million a year.

Where does the money go?

COPTERS EXPENSIVE

Well, helicopters are a very expensive form of transportation, even when they are sitting on the ground as most of the Air American aircraft contracted to the ICCS have been doing recently.

The ICCS contract with Air America comes to at least $14 million a year, conceivably more if they put in the maximum number of flying hours anticipated. That covers about 30 helicopters and several airplanes. There are offices and quarters to rent and communications among the seven regional headquarters and 30-odd team sites around South Vietnam.

There are base maintenance, and drivers for about 650 jeeps, cars and buses.

CLEANERS

There are security guards around various outposts, cleaners and sweepers and repairmen for buildings, secretaries, and translators in offices, messing facilities and food contracts, furniture and office equipment to be bought or rented.

Figures are again a matter of guesswork but it seems that perhaps 5,000 Vietnamese are working for the ICCS or its contractors and several hundred Americans and other foreigners are drawing for larger salaries for skills no Vietnamese can offer.

The Paris peace accords strictly limit the ICCS to a total of 1,170 personnel.

A MOST BOISTEROUS, OYSTEROUS TIME OF IT

DENMAN ISLAND (CP) — The first "World Oyster Shucking" championship held here was without a doubt the most boisterous, oysterous, let's-have-another-beer event in this island's history.

For the record, the event was won by Ken Barkley, 19, of Union Bay. Barkley, whose hands were a blurr of motion as he pried, peeled, plucked and shucked 47 oysters in five minutes to capture the Oyster Bowl Challenge Trophy, $50 cash and a fishing rod.

Barkley, whose family is in the oyster business, was a trifle amused by his victory.

"Shucks," he murmured deadpan, "I don't even like oysters."

While the contest itself was fascinating to watch, the most spectacular thing about the festival on this island was the amount of oysters consumed.

Organizers estimated the contest attracted more than 2,000 people and it appeared that every one of them, save top shucker Barkley, was eating oysters.

Literally thousands of oysters, raw, stewed, smoked, pickled, broiled and fried were served up. Purists, claiming "it's the only way to eat 'em, man," slurped them straight from the shell.

The festival's beer garden did a roaring business as well.

Police Off To Convention

Greater Victoria police department will send representatives to the International Association for Identification, Washington-B.C. division's annual convention in Seattle this weekend.

Co-ordinator Plan Approved

An experiment in replacing school vice-principals with curriculum co-ordinators was approved by Sooke school board Tuesday night.

Glen Lake Elementary School will have two co-ordinators instead of one vice-principal starting in September.

"It's an experiment which has been tried in other places in B.C. with success," said Sooke district superintendent P. B. Pullinger.

The co-ordinators will keep up on curriculum changes, help teachers collect information and also teach a regular class and assume some of the normal duties of a vice-principal.

Appointed to the new positions are Mrs. Patricia Cotton, as primary co-ordinator, and Andre de Hoog, as secondary co-ordinator.

The school board also approved appointment of Terence Sanky to the principalship of Edward Milne Secondary in September, replacing Don Curley who will take over band instruction in Colwood-area schools.

Realtors Supporting Land Commission

Provincial real estate president Norman Ross says his industry supports the new land commission act in principle but has some reservations about how it may work in practice.

Ross, head of the Real Estate Institute of British Columbia, said he hopes the commission established by the New Democratic Party government will seek the suggestions of his organization.

"We are all in favor of greenbanks and farm preserving with Attorney-General Alex Macdonald and is hopeful he will have the opportunity to make additional submissions on behalf in the industry.

"However we are concerned that some areas may be wrongly designated as farmland or greenbelt. We want to discuss this problem with the commission."

Ross made the comments in an interview at the start of the three-day convention of the institute at The Empress.

He said he made some preliminary suggests to the provincial government at a meeting with Attorney-General Alex Macdonald and is hopeful he will have the opportunity to make additional submissions on behalf in the industry.

A discussion on the land commission act will feature Thursday afternoon's session of the convention.

"However it won't be a lively session, not controversial," Ross said.

The convention opened this morning with divisional meetings of the institute.

Convention chairman Eric Charman, president of the Victoria Real Estate Board, said 550 delegates were registered, about 150 more than at any previous meeting of the institute.

Besides the discussion on the land commission, a convention feature Thursday will be a panel on hiring practices in real estate.

Ross said the industry is urging greater selectivity in hiring.

People hired as real estate salesmen must be interested in making it a full-time job, must be knowledgeable and a credit to the business, he said.

A tour of Victoria on double-decker buses will be a feature of Friday's activities at the convention. The tour is designed to give delegates an idea of real estate values here.

Luncheon speaker Friday will be A. H. Fitzsimmons, vide-president of the Canadian Real Estate Association, speaking on new concepts of land use.

Another recipe from the Gold Seal Galley

Salmon Continental

1 15½ oz. can Gold Seal salmon (or 2 - 7¾ oz. cans)
1 tblsp. butter
1 tblsp. flour
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 cup evaporated milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
2 tblsp. soft butter
2 tblsp. lemon juice
20 cooked asparagus spears (or 2 cups cooked green beans)
½ cup grated sharp cheddar cheese

Blend 1 tablespoon butter, flour, salt and pepper in saucepan over low heat. Slowly add milk. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Slowly stir a little hot sauce into beaten egg yolks. Add to remaining sauce. Stir in soft butter and lemon juice. Place hot asparagus in large shallow casserole. Top with salmon pieces. Spoon sauce over top. Sprinkle with cheese. Broil 5-6 inches from heat until sauce is bubbly (about 5 minutes). Serves 6.

Container Crane Clipped by Ship

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 200-foot high container crane on the Vancouver waterfront was clipped by the bow of a ship leaving the harbor Tuesday and came close to toppling into the water.

A port authority spokesman said the crane was knocked to a 20 degree list by the Greek ship Megalopolis and quick work by work crews kept it from falling over.

BCR Can't Meet Demand

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — British Columbia Railway is unable to meet the car loading demands of lumber producers in northern B.C. and there is no immediate prospect of improvement, Norm McPherson, operations manager of the provincially-owned railway, said Tuesday.

He said lumber manufacturers were using trucks to move lumber from remote sawmills to Prince George, where Canadian National Railways facilities were available.

He said the problem stemmed from a shortage of rail freight cars normally available from United States railways. The U.S. lines were using the cars to move grain rather than lumber.

Brothers Acquitted in Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two brothers were acquitted Tuesday of attempted murder in connection with a fight last October.

Amarsit and Gursev Sandhu had originally been charged with non-capital murder in the death of Joginder Athwal, who was said to be involved in a fracas here last Oct. 13 and died in hospital a month later of a seriously infected pancreas.

Barrett 'Guilty of Subterfuge'

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Liberal leader David Anderson Tuesday night repeated allegations that Premier Barrett is guilty of a subterfuge in offering to share with the federal government the costs of a study comparing Prince Rupert and Britannia, on Howe Sound, as coal shipping terminals.

He said Barrett has done so because of "a conflict of interest between his function as president of the British Columbia Railway and his function as premier of B.C., "adding that Barrett had only supported Britannia to favor the BCR. Prince Rupert is served by Canadian National Railways.

Delta Allows Airport Drag Racing

DELTA (CP) — Delta council voted Tuesday to allow drag racing at the Boundary Bay Airport but set a list of conditions under which races could be held. Council voted to ask the Canadian Hot Rod Association for agreement to the conditions, which include payment for extra police and noise monitoring costs.

Legion to Aid Gurkhas

VERNON, B.C. (CP) — The convention of Pacific Command, Royal Canadian Legion, voted Tuesday to set up a $40,000 fund to assist needy veterans of the Brigade of Gurkhas in Nepal.

The resolution passed by the convention noted that many Gurkhas, who were renowned for their bravery in fighting for the Commonwealth in wartime, were suffering extreme poverty in peacetime.

Data Firm Slams Gov't Choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of Honeywell Information Systems say they would have welcomed a chance to bid on a computer contract—given without tenders to IBM Canada Ltd. — for British Columbia's new auto insurance scheme.

Lin Wotton, Honeywell accounts manager in Vancouver, said Tuesday he believes his company could have delivered the necessary computer services by the required deadline and at possibly $25,000 per month less than the IBM contract.

He confirmed the claim by Liberal leader David Anderson last week that Honeywell, Canada's second largest computer firm (behind the giant IBM), is "lean and hungry" and anxious to compete for such contracts. Anderson termed the no-bid award to IBM a "major scandal."

Bob Strachan, B.C.'s commercial transport and communications minister, said last week that he decided on expert advice from government data processing experts to give the contract to IBM. He said IBM is the only computer company capable of meeting the January, 1974, deadline, with the required services.

Wotton said his firm was not given any opportunity to bid, and he added that Honeywell equipment is a "superior performance system with about one-third more processing power" than the hardware being supplied to the Insurance Corp. of B.C. by IBM.

In Toronto, Honeywell's western district manager, Peter Sheridan, said it is the company's policy to price equipment slightly lower than IBM.

"It is necessary to do that when one has 10-12 per cent of the business, compared to 60 per cent," Sheridan said.

He said IBM makes about 14 per cent profit compared to Honeywell's three per cent.

The IBM contract with the Insurance Corp. of B.C. is for $1.5 million per year for lease of the computer, plus a once-only payment of $1 million to program it for the auto insurance scheme.

Cheap Eggs Sought In Court Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — F and W Wholesale Ltd. of Trail is taking court action to quash a search warrant under which 4,605 dozen eggs were seized by the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board, a lawyer for the company said Tuesday.

Richard D'Andrea said the notice of motion, which names Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, was filed in Cranbrook last week. He said the date for a court hearing is expected to be set next week.

The eggs, brought in from Manitoba, were seized last month from F and W Wholesale, which owns five Super-Value retail outlets in the Kootenays.

D'Andrea said the motion contends that standing orders which allow the Egg Marketing Board to control the entry of eggs into B.C. are outside the jurisdiction of the lieutenant-governor in council and of provincial legislation.

Railway Clears Grain Blockage

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two hundred grain cars delayed for a week by a derailment on the Canadian National Railways main line near Ashcroft were on the move to Vancouver terminals Tuesday.

A CNR spokesman said there were 400 cars in the yards here Tuesday and another 300 en route from Jasper.

B.C. Gov't 'Worst Polluter'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis wants pollution control standards implemented at B.C. government-controlled mills, which he says are among the worst polluters in the province.

Davis, speaking in a telephone interview from Ottawa Tuesday, referred to the newsprint mill at Ocean Falls, now owned outright by the provincial government, and sulphite and kraft pulp mills near Prince Rupert, which are to be taken overby the New Democratic Party government June 29.

He said the mills would have cost their private owners "tens of millions" to bring up to federal pollution control standards. And he added that while it may have been difficult for Ottawa to impose the standards on private owners, the B.C. government is wealthy enough to implement the federal pollution standards.

"When the new management of these mills shakes down," he said, "we, arm in arm with the provincial pollution control branch, will go and talk to their management about a schedule of compliance with the standards."

The environment minister said Ocean Falls is not as serious a problem as the mills near Prince Rupert because Ocean Falls has caused no fish kills while the Rupert Mills have.

Davis also disclosed he is attempting to arrange a meeting within two weeks with Robert Williams, B.C. lands, forests and water resources minister, to discuss negotiations aimed at cancelling B.C.'s Skagit Valley flooding agreement with Seattle City Light.

He said the federal government intends to present B.C. Hydro and Power authority with a $2.5 million bill covering the cost of repairing damage to the Athabasca delta caused by construction of the W. A. C. Bennett dam on the Peace River. He said the figure is the amount spent by Ottawa, Alberta and Saskatchewn to repair the damage.

And he pointed out that the natives of the delta once had a lawyer seeking compensation for them — that lawyer is the former B.C. NDP leader Tom Berger, now a supreme court judge.

He said he's learned through diplomatic channels that Premier Barrett, while on a trip to Washington in March, was told Seattle City Light wants a bloc of B.C., power in return for cancellation of its further Skagit flooding rights.

He added that he understands Barrett was not sympathetic to the idea.

Although there have been meetings at the federal level between Canada and the U.S. on the Skagit, the minister said the 1967 contract is between B.C. and Seattle City Light and they must settle the dispute.

He said he has heard talk from Seattle that B.C. may be asked to compensate Seattle City Light to the extent of $30 million to $40 million.

Handy Kidnap Hints

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Police launched a national anti-kidnapping campaign today by sending a list of "handy hints against kidnappings" to such possible targets as diplomats, politicians, millionaires and other prominent persons.

The campaign, apparently triggered by a wave of kidnappings blamed of leftist guerrillas, was initiated by Col. Carlos Guzman Benitez, chief of the special investigations police.

Some of his listed hints:

—Always let your family know where you are, even if this is inconvenient for you.

—Instruct your family and servants to tell no one about your daily routine.

—Don't follow routines. Change the route home from the office every once in a while. Try not to go alone. Try to be accompanied by one or more persons.

—When you drive, don't give anyone a lift.

—Install a siren on your car, sound it if you notice something suspicious so police will know something is going on. Give your chauffeur a weapon and if you can, organize an escort.

Car Trip Insurance Tested

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. dealerships in Chicago and Atlanta have begun testing a plan to reimburse subscribing motorists by as much as $450 of vacation travel expenditures incurred if their car breaks down.

For a $15 registration fee, Ford will pay 75 per cent up to $225 for car repair costs, "if the car becomes inoperable due to mechanical failure" during a vacation anywhere in the United States, Canada or Mexico.

The plan also will cover the same percentage of money spent on food, lodging, car rental, towing and road service for travellers stranded by car failure or an accident, with the same limit.

The insurance will run through Sept. 1.

Timber Titan Lashes NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Timber titan J. V. Clyne fired up his feud with David Lewis today, citing the NDP national leader's minority government muscle as the major stumbling block to a realistic settlement of Canada-U.S. trade differences.

Mr. Clyne, recently-retired board chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., Canada's biggest forest-products company, unleashed a fresh broadside at Mr. Lewis and the NDP in a speech to the Canadian Managing Editors' Conference.

"There can be no doubt that present government policies are subject to the whims of the NDP," said Mr. Clyne, noting that Mr. Lewis and his New Democrats hold only 31 of 264 Commons seats.

Prime Minister Trudeau and the Liberal minority government "must abide by the dictates of a party" which represents only a small fraction of Canadian voters but holds the balance of power in Parliament.

Clyne said it is clear that Mr. Lewis is calling the shots for the Liberals and "it is certain that so long as Lewis pulls the strings we may expect no immediate and clear-cut trade policy vis-a-vis the United States."

"About 10 days ago Mr. Lewis said that he did not think that Canada is ready to seek any settlement of Canadian-American trade problems at the present time," said the 71-yearold industrialis. "If this is the kind of leadership we must accept, Canada is certainly in a sorry state."

Mr. Clyne and Mr. Lewis fought a widely-publicized battle over the latter's "corporate rip-off" theme during the final weeks of the campaign preceding the October, 1972, federal election.

And now Mr. Clyne thinks it's time for another election to give the Liberals or Conservatives a decisive majority mandate "to rescue Canada from its present drift" into a trade vacuum.

He told managing editors representing more than 50 Canadian daily newspapers that Canada now is "out at the end of a long, long limb and seems incapable, at the moment, of taking any real initiative to ease her plight."

The growth of multi-national trade blocs such as the European Common Market has left Canada "weaponless and alone," unable to exert any pressure on its wheat-buying customers, unlikely to negotiate any concessions from hardnosed Japanese resource buyers, and unlikely to improve sales of manufactured goods to ECM customers.

The lone alternative, Mr. Clyne suggested, is formation of a free-trade area between Canada and the United States —"the most useful and sensible form of relationship" in an open framework that would allow both nations to make trade arrangements with other countries independently.

Mr. Clyne, still a MacMillan Bloedel director, pointed out that Canada does have "a certain leverage" with the U.S. in energy resources, with the Americans facing severe shortages in the next few years while Canadians have a big surplus.

He urged the federal government to get on with construction of the proposed Mackenzie Valley pipeline jointly with the Americans—and to disregard B.C. Premier Dave Barrett's proposal for an Arctic railway from the Alaskan oil fields through northern Canada to U.S. markets.

Lashing out again at the NDP, this time at Barrett's provincial administration, Clyne described the oil railway proposal as "a sheer waste of time that will come to nothing."

"Instead of coming to a conclusion on this subject and getting on with the building of a pipeline, Canada is dithering over an obviously uneconomical proposal to build a railway which appears to be an obvious effort of the government in Ottawa to ingratiate itself with the NDP."

Americans, he said, are "sick of hearing that their money is not wanted in Canada, that they are damaging our economy, and that they are exercising a baleful influence on our culture."

$1.25 Million In Old Cars To Tour Island

Antique cars valued at more than $1.25 million will tour Southern Vancouver Island this weekend.

The three-day event which starts Friday is sponsored by the Victoria branch of the Vintage Car Club of Canada and will attract automobiles from B.C., Washington, Oregon and California.

The public will be able to view the cars on Saturday afternoon at the Empress Hotel. On display will be vehicles ranging from a 1902 Holley to Deusenburgs, Packards and other exotic cars of the 20's and 30's.

Birthday Party Magic — Jolly Gremlins, Circus Train, Candlelight Carousels.

Party Time Merrymakers Created with Ice Cream

Here are some easy, yet novel ideas to keep in mind the next time you are planning a children's birthday party. Watch the excitement and fun generated by these ice cream creations — bricks of ice cream in the form of a circus train, chocolate cupcakes disguised as gremlins, and individual sundae 'cakes' each topped with candles. Always a favourite of kids, ice cream has good food value too.

2—3-pint ctns. vanilla ice cream, peppermint candy stick, chocolate-coated animal cookies*. 3 large (approx. 3 oz.) chocolate bars, 8 vanilla wafers or choc. candy coins, sweetened whipping cream.

Turn ice cream bricks out onto a long serving plate. Working quickly, press a chocolate bar onto the top of each brick and join bricks with peppermint stick. Press wafers or candy "coins" into place for the wheels and fill in spaces between with squares of remaining chocolate bar. Press animal cookies into sides of each brick and pipe whipped cream between cookies for the bars of the cage. Place in freezer until ready to serve. Makes 12 to 14 servings.

*Or use plain animal cookies dipped in melted chocolate (plain chocolate bar or sweet chocolate square). Place in refrigerator until chocolate has hardened.

Instructions for "Jolly Gremlins" and "Candlelight Carousels" are also included in this week's issue of "Woodward's Recipes and Tips Recipe Sheet," available at all Woodward's Food Floors.

Couple Learning Esperanto Assists Language of Love

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION family

By NICOLE STRICKLAND

When Victoria's Wally du Temple married Olga Valentova in July of last year, Wally spoke no Czechoslovakian, Olga's native tongue, and Olga spoke no English, du Temple's first language.

Only one thing to do — communicate in the international language. If you're thinking that's the language of love, think again. The du Temples communicate in Esperanto, the universal language spoken by people in 80 countries for the past 80 years.

Want-Ad Meet

"We met," says Wally du Temple, "through an ad asking for pen-pals that I placed in an Esperanto newspaper. Olga was one of the ones who replied."

Olga du Temple learned the language in the Czechoslovakian school system, where Esperanto is a credit course, taught as a second language.

"When we were married," says du Temple, "about 100 Esperantists attended and the service was conducted entirely in Esperanto. Today I teach Olga English on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, but our main communication is still in Esperanto."

Baby on Way

The du Temples have a baby due in the summer, and intend to raise it with Esperanto as its first language.

"Teaching the language is one way to find Esperanto's internal ideal of international friendship and harmony. And it's such an easy language to learn."

The language, unlike most other languages, is completely regular. There are 16 rules and no exceptions, while most languages have not only exceptions to rules but exceptions to exceptions.

The form of the verb remains constant, no matter what pronoun is being used. I talk, he talks, they talk translates mi parolas, il parolas, ili parolas.

With such typical regularities in the language, it is no wonder that even the beginning student of Esperanto can pick up words effortlessly.

Esperanto is taught as an official second language in the schools of Austria, Holland, Belgium, Cuba, Great Britain, Yugoslavia, parts of the United States, and other countries. It is not accepted as a second language in any Canadian school.

Polish Design

A 19th-century Polish linguist spent years designing the language as his life's dream, incorporating Latin, Spanish, French, Italian, Portuguese, German, English, and Russian into the single tongue.

Today, estimates of the numbers speaking the language range from half a million to 10 million. About 100 people in Vancouver, Victoria, and New Westminster speak Esperanto, with regular club meetings held at least once a week.

Each year, world congresses are held with 5,000 to 6,000 Esperantists attending. There is an annual yearbook listing an 'Esperanto House' in many cities where travellers speaking Esperanto may stay in a family home overnight and for breakfast, at $2 a night.

Du Temple estimates that there are about 10,000 books of all different languages translated into Esperanto. There are over 100 newspapers and magazines appearing regularly in the Esperanto tongue.

Says du Temple: "Esperanto can be learned in about 60 hours of concentrated study, or by dividing the normal learning time for most languages by about five. It's far easier to learn than other languages, because the rules are so flexible.

"Our aim is to see it taught in the elementary schools, preferably at about the fifth grade level. Children won't be afraid to go on and learn French or other languages once they're already fluent in English and Esperanto."

And there's been a breakthrough in the du Temple and Valentova parental households: both mothers-in-law are learning Esperanto so they can communicate with each other.

Spring's Still Blooming

I've said it before. Nevertheless, I believe it bears repeating again. This is the time of year when everyone who has a car should drive out into the country to renew acquaintance with the glories of nature.

In this last month of spring, while the leaves and the grass are still a young green, it's worth taking a few hours to enjoy the sight of the flowering trees and shrubs.

There seems to be an extra heavy flowering this year. It's not always you find the mountain ash (rowans to the Scots) so laden with blossoms. Nor the abundance of arbutus flowers that you will see along the roadsides right now.

These small waxy blooms that grow in clusters and that look for all the world like the old-fashioned kerosene lamps of pioneer days, appear one year in quantity and then for several years, they almost disappear.

This is one of their heavy blooming years. And when the sun glints on the waxy clusters and on the crisp green leaves and wine red bark of the arbutus it's a picture you'll not easily forget.

The dogwoods are also in bloom. Wherever you choose to drive you'll see these four, five and sometimes six-petalled flowers, etching patterns of beauty against the yellow-green of the maples and the darker green of the firs.

To see these trees at their best you must turn away from the highways and take to the older roads that wander between farms and woodlands.

There's the West Saanich Road. You can follow it all the way to Deep Cove and see dogwoods wherever you look. Or, if you prefer to go up-Island, there's no better place for viewing them than on the old road from Duncan to Chemainus.

On the old road to Mill Bay you'll see not only the flowering trees but wild columbines and honeysuckle. There is also the Yellow Point Road that leads around and through the Cranberry district and across a bridge that spans a river where the yellow green of maple flowers are reflected in every quiet pool.

There are daisies in the fields, lambs in the meadows, knobby-kneed colts in the pastures and moon-eyed calves in the clover.

In old-fashioned gardens that surround nearly every cottage and farmhouse door, you'll see lilac in bloom.

Flame trees and snowball trees, too. Iris and pansies, rhododendrons and azaleas. And because of the particularly warm weather this year, roses (especially the old-fashioned climbers) are well along in bloom and their fragrance fills the air.

The countryside is only dressed in this young raiment for a very short time. So, do drive out the Saanich Peninsula or up-Island soon.

Meander along any of the older roads that bend and turn between farms and woodland and you'll come back convinced there are no more lovely spots anywhere than near your own back door.

You'll also return to your daily tasks refreshed and with the glories of nature indelibly etched in your memory.

As Canada's great poet, Bliss Carmen, wrote in 1920, when he was a patient at Lake Placid, New York:

"There is virtue in the open;
there is healing out of doors;
"The Great Physician makes his rounds along the forest floors."

Dizziness 14th On Ills Parade

TORONTO (CP) — Dizziness ranks 14th on the list of the most common complaints that bring patients to their family doctor, fairly close to then more common complaints such as rash and earache.

The most common ones are coughs, sore throats, nausea and vomiting, back pains and colds, said Dr. Cliff Raid, director of the family practice unit at McMaster University, Hamilton.

"But dizziness as a major symptom is more common than many people realize," he said after a presentation to a meeting of the Ontario Medical Association.

He recently has completed a study of reasons for visits to family doctors, which covered a four-year period. He then carried out further studies to see what kinds of conditions had been diagnosed for those who first had visited doctors because of dizziness.

Nearly one-quarter had been caused by some form of heart or blood vessel disease, such as high or low blood pressure, he said. One of every five was caused by emotional complaints and another one out of five by some form of ear condition.

Raid was one of a panel of nine doctors who discussed diagnosis and treatment of the various forms of dizziness including that which plagues many patients who have had head injuries.

About 90 per cent of patients who have severe head injuries, such as blows on the head, are plagued with dizziness for prolonged periods, said Dr. Hugh Barber of Toronto, head of a special dizziness unit at Sunnybrook Hospital

He described use of a new diagnostic machine using electrodes — an electronystagmograph — for measuring the rapid flickering of the eyes which usually occur during dizzy spells.

Fruit Cookies Sugar Free

By HILDA BEASTALL

Two cookie recipes today with enough fruit in them so that no sougar is needed. The wheat germ, wholewheat flour and other grains add their quote of natural sweetening.

The Chewy Rounds are the kind of snacks for hikes and walks in the woods. They need chewing, they last for many minutes of eating, they don't leave you thirst, and they sustain with their grains and dried skim milk powder, and the natural sweetness of dates. The rounds should be roled or patted to about one-quarter-inch thinkness, and may be any diameter. Large three-inch rounds are more chewy than one-inch, which you will find drisper.

CHEWY ROUNDS

1 c. wholewheat flour
½ c. bran
½ c. rolled rye
1 1tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
¼ c. dried skim milk powder
2 tbsp margarine
½ c. chopped dates
½ c. water

Sift first seven ingredients into large bowl. Cut in the margarine. Add chopped dates. Mix to a manageable dough with the water added gradually. Roll on lightly floured board. Cut or pat into rounds. Bake on lightly greased cookie sheet about 15 minutes at 375 degs.

Fruit Drop Cookies have more fruit and are of softer texture. You will get about four-dozen small drops from these amounts.

FRUIT DROP COOKIES

1 c. chopped dates
1 c. raisins
½ c. warm water
6 tbsp soft margarine
1 large or 2 small eggs
1 c. unbleached flour
¾ c. whole wheat flour
¼ c. wheat germ
¼ c. skim milk powder
½ tsp baking powder
½ tsp salt
grating of nutmeg.

Pour warm water over dates and raisins. Set aside. Cream margarine; add eggs, beat lightly.

Sift and mix all dry ingredients together; then blend with the egg mixture, adding the fruit and water to mix to a lumpy mixture.

Drop by spoonfuls on ungreased bake sheet. Bake about 15 minutes until set in 375 deg. oven.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and a junior in high school, and I live with my grandparents. My best friend (I'll call her Donna) is my age and we've been like sisters all our lives since she lives across the street.

My grandparents think Donna is an angel, so yesterday while they were going on and on about how perfect Donna was, I got mad and blurted out that Donna went all the way with Kenny, the boy she's been going steady with. I was sorry right after I said it, but it was too late.

Well, last night Grandpa said he felt it was his duty to tell Donna's father what I told him, but he needed my co-operation. Now he wants to repeat to Donna's father what I told him. Abby, what I said was true, but I don't want to repeat it to Donna's father.

My grandpa is giving me a week to decide on what I want to say. I need your help, Abby. should I co-operate or not? I really don't want to. I feel like a rat. — Big Mouth.

DEAR BIG MOUTH; You've already done too much talking. Tell grandpa you don't want to repeat what you said about Donna. If he wants to tell Donna's father, you can't stop him. If he does, I hope you have a substitute best friend warming up in the bullpen.

DEAR ABBY: My divorce will be final in three weeks, but my ex is still following me around begging me to give him another chance.

Abby, I still love him, but I don't want to live with him. He's insanely jealous for no reason at all. I am a good Christian woman and never gave him cause to doubt me, but he has beat me up several times trying to get me to "confess."

Once he broke my nose, knocked out four teeth, and I had 22 stitches in my lip. then he pinned me up against the wall and broke my collarbone. that's when I filed for divorce.

My friends say I'd have to be crazy to take him back. I still love him. what would you do? — In Doubt.

DEAR IN: I certainly wouldn't take him back. But if you do, you should try to find a psychiatrist with two couches — one for you and one for him.

DEAR ABBY: In an attempt to criticize you for your views on bathing, a quartet of women wrote: "you belong in India, where your views allow you to label women 'Unclean' and 'untouchable.'

First of all, the untouchable caste, which applied only to men, has been outlawed in India since 1947. Secondly, Indians are among the cleanest people on earth. Hindus, who comprise 85 per cent of India's population, bathe every morning as a religious ritual. And it is not uncommon for an Indian to take three or four baths a day. They may be poor, but they're clean.

And finally, anyone who believes that women take a back seat in India should be reminded that India's leader is a woman. — Up On India.

DEAR UP: Three cheers for India! People are usually down on what they're not up on.

PHRASES CAN STYMIE TOURING CANADIANS

OTTAWA (CP) — Waiter, there's a fish in my coffee!

That's the kind of phrase that makes many tourists' language books useless, Languages Commissioner Keith Spicer told the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee.

He said his office is studying the merits of producing a phrase book to help English and French Canadians travel in their own country.

Also under study is a computer-based word bank that would speed translation of government documents and which could be used by subscribers around the world to translate English and French.

If Grandpa Speaks Up Find Another Friend

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thursday, May 24
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stalemate is resolved. You get action in areas which had been dormant. Many who were afraid to approach you now express feelings. This is all to the good and you are beneficiary. Friendship is two-way street. Know it; act like you know it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Strive for harmony, especially where family relations are concerned. One who means much to you needs "kind word." Give it and more—and the more you give, the better for all. Libra plays key role. Promotion is due.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Most answers now come from within. You really do understand what is best—key is to map programm and to follow it. Long-range schedule is in picture. Write, advertise and publicize. Get message across!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check stock, invoices, inventories. Find out what should be maintained, what must be dicarded. Streamline procedures. Take advantage of older person's experience. Don't permit pride to dictate actions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent is on special agreements, legal documents, including contract which results in wider audience, more customers, added sales. Permit those close to you to have their say. Then you gain valuable allies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New deal occurs in area of employment. Your work becomes more exciting. You are able to be more creative. Health factors are involved: You feel stronger, more independent. Leo will co-operate. Know it and take appropriate steps.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spotlights on affairs of heart Your ability to know what others want and need is emphasized. Young persons confides problem. Be attentive but hold off on advice. Indications are that you are sought as sounding board, little else.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Combine imagination with practicality. Means strive for balance Sagittarian may be enthusiastic, but knowledge could be lacking. Know it and respond accordingly. Get facts from reliable sources.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Willingness to aid Scorpio is fine—but it is not wise to become inextricably involved. Emphasis is on short trip, special message, the need to be thorough. If versatile, you make significant gain. Diversity!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on collecting, spending, taking financial stock. You solve dilemma. Profit could result. Gemini, Virgo are apt to be in picture. Some significant changes occur which provide direct benefits for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Gift, accolade, flattery—these come your way. Maintain balance. You are riding a crest. Don't trip because of wanting too much, too soon. Member of opposite sex does care. But diplomacy is required.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Play low key. Someone wants to aid your cause but requires more time. Subtle approach proves most constructive. What appears a fantasy may actually have practical application. Another Piscean is involved.

Clumsy Child Sifted to Bottom of Social Heap

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Something sad happens to the child who always gets chosen last in games, who falls off his bike and can't seem to catch a ball.

His self-image suffers.

By the time he outgrows his clumsiness, if he ever does, he has already absorbed a great deal of social punishment from his peers.

He may compensate in a variety of ways — by concentrating on his studies and becoming a scholar, or by spending his recesses helping the teacher clean erasers.

He may become what some experts term a dive-bomber — the kid who zooms around the playground crashing into other children and hitting. A study of juvenile arrests shows that youngsters with perceptual - motor problems have a disproportionately high percentage of truancy.

And although nobody seems to understand just why, more boys than girls suffer from motor difficulties. Some of these youngsters develop sex gender identification problems — they find refuge playing with the girls instead of trying to compete with other boys.

For the past 10 years, kinesiologists at UCLA — University of California at Los Angeles — working with clumsy children in a special remedial program for perceptual-motor learning.

Its director, Dr. Bryant Cratty, says 20 per cent of all youngsters — or about 50 children in every elementary school in the United States — suffers from a motor problem, to one degree or another.

Youngsters referred to Cratty undergo an hour-long test with their parents watching through a one-way mirror. They are also given a game-choice quiz and asked questions which reveal that most of them consider themselves unpopular and feel unhappy much of the time.

After their individual problems are analyzed, the children may be enrolled in twice-weekly after school sessions designed to improve their coordination, balance, agility and physical skills.

"We improve movement in the kids who don't work well with their bodies," Cratty said. "We are interested in movement for its own sake because clumsy children are unhappy."

"They range over the entire IQ system," he says. "They just can't work effectively with their bodies. We have one six-year-old now who moved like a two-year old when we got him, but he could read from the dictionary."

According to Cratty, there are some 60 or 70 possible causes of motor disabilities — but the most common stem from difficult births — sometimes from birth anoxyia, a breathing problem caused by a prolapsed cord or a cord wrapped around the infant's neck, momentarily hindering oxygen supply to the brain.

"But usually it is not too fruitful to determine the cause on to worry about whose genes are at fault. It is better to try to solve the problem," Cratty says.

He hires undergraduate students to work with the youngsters, aged four-to-thirteen on about a one-to-three ratio. Smaller groups put too much pressure on the child, he feels.

The children practice bouncing on trampolines, tightrope walking on wide balance beams, and somersaulting on padded mats in the gymnasium of an elementary school.

"The prognosis for these kids is pretty good, if we catch them young enough," Cratty says. "Although we do not know whether we have actually modified their neurological problem or just taught them more effective strategies for accomplishing motor tasks."

By the time he's three, Cratty says a child ought to be able to walk a two-inch wide line for ten feet, draw a simple cross with a crayon, and jump forward three steps with both feet in the air.

At five, he should be able to draw circles and squares, touch his fingertips consecutively to the tip of his thumb, and balance frozen on one foot for four to six seconds.

A seven-year-old ought to be able to toss a ball 15 feet into a four-foot square target and skip rhythmically.

"A five or six-year-old who can't touch consecutive fingertips is also going to have trouble tying his shoes or fastening buttons," Cratty observed.

Lebanon Boasts Fewer Divorces

BEIRUT (AP) — Divorce is increasing in socially conservative Lebanon, but this small eastern Mediterranean country still has one of the lowest rates in the world.

Despite its Western appearance, Lebanese society remains very Arab. Family and religion still play a dominant role, especially if a marriage is heading toward the rocks.

A recently divorced Lebanese said: "It was a pretty shattering experience. First uncles and cousins and other relatives tried to help, then we were sent off to see a priest. But nothing worked. The marriage was a mistake."

According to United Nations figures, the Lebanese divorce rate is 0.40 per thousand population. Egypt's is 1.92, and the United States' is 2.92.

Experts here agree divorce is highest among young couples and usually occurs in in the first five years of marriage.

Echoing many of his counterparts in other countries, Rev. Faud Bahnan, secretary of Lebanon's Protestant community, said: "Young Lebanese tend to view marriage as a kind of experiment which may or may not succeed. The old spirit of commitment is fading."

As in neighboring Israel, marriage and divorce are in the hands of religious authorities in half-Christian, half-Moslem Lebanon to preserve communal harmony. Thus, breaking the nuptial knot takes time and money.

Divorce, which the Prophet Mohammed, founder of Islam, called "the most hated human weakness," is easier for Moslems than Christians. This has led some Christians wih martital troubles to convert.

Later this month large formation of Canada Geese will start to fly northward to their breeding grounds in the various parts of Canada.

According to the six-page leaflet Canada Goose some of these elegant birds winter in southern Canada, but most spend the winter in the southern United States and in northeastern Mexico.

Although at one time dangerously depleted through excessive hunting, the Canada Geese population now numbers 1.5 million birds. Their appearance varies greatly, because over 20 subspecies exist. That means that in one region a Canada goose may weigh an average of three pounds, and in another the average weight may be six times as much. In one province the wingspread of this wonderful bird may be 3 feet and in the next over 6 feet. But all the races have distinguishing whitish cheek patches and a black head, crown and neck.

The leaflet also discusses the habits of Canada Geese, with those of the large honkers considered typical. You will also read about the breeding and nesting habits of these majestic birds and about their migration periods.

Superman Is 35 Friday

METROPOLIS, Ill. — Superman, the do-gooder from the planet Krypton, will observe his 35th birthday Friday night at a party in the town that adopted him. They're calling it the "first birthday party for an alien."

On Saturday, as the last notes of the national anthem fade across the Ohio River and 1,000 helium-filled balloons are released, the "Amazing World of Superman Exhibition Centre" will open its doors to the public.

Superman adopted this town of 7,000 deep in southeastern Illinois Jan. 21, 1972. The town is supposed to be the only place named Metropolis in the world. The local newspaper, the Metropolis News, changed its name to the Metropolis Planet last May.

PRISONER Marc Cayer, held by North Vietnamese for five years, poses with his book, "Marc Cayer, Prisoner in Vietnam," launched in Montreal Tuesday.

FOLSOM, Calif. — Timothy Leary tended a different grass and practised a new flower power today. Leary, 52, once the guru of the marijuana and LSD set, was assigned to care for the lawn inside the main gates of Folsom Prison Tuesday. He will also be responsible for petunias, sweetpeas and marigolds, a prison spokesman said. Leary is serving time at Folsom on marijuana and escape convictions.

MONTEBELLO, Que. — Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie warned Tuesday against going too far in gathering statistics and against blindly believing that more information means better decisions.

"We need more and better decision-makers," he said in a speech to a federal-provincial conference on economic statistics here.

SAN FRANCISCO — The U.S. immigration and naturalization service Tuesday refused to grant political asylum to Philippine diplomat Ruperto Baliao, who has accused president Ferdinand Marcos of being "a new Hitler." The service said it would be simpler for Baliao, former acting consul general of the Philippines in Los Angeles, to merely apply for resident alien status.

MONTREAL — Yvon Dupuis, Ralliement Creditiste leader, said the brother of Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque will run as a Creditiste in the next provincial election.

Fernand Levesque, a 47-year-old lawyer, was an active Liberal supporter for more than 20 years and was a journalist before practising law.

STONEWALL, Tex. — Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson has thrown what may have been one of the last of the big LBJ Ranch parties — to sell off her husband's prize herd of Hereford cattle.

A total of 213 cattle were sold during the 4½-hour auction, bringing in $140,560. The highest price paid for a single head was $2,650 for a bull.

OTTAWA — Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray said Tuesday he had "a high degree of success" in getting people to serve on the commons-proposed prices review board and he hopes to announce the make-up of the board soon. He made the comment but did not elaborate when questioned in the house by Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway).

DORTMUND, Germany — Former world champion Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union was held to his third consecutive draw Tuesday in the fifth round of the West German Open Chess Championships.

Spassky's draw with West Berlin's Juergen Dueball gave him a total of 2.5 points from five rounds, keeping him in eighth place of the 16-player tournament.

Whelan's Resignation Is Urged

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — Jeremy Akerman, provincial New Democratic Party leader, has called for the resignation of federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan for what he called misleading the public.

Akerman, in a statement issued from his home here, said Whelan is protecting the real culprits in the controversy over rising food prices.

"By forging an artificial division between farmer and consumer, Mr. Whelan is, in effect, protecting the packing and supply sector," he said.

Whelan is travelling the country "like an old medicine man spreading confusion, distortion and dissension," he said, and is using a false proposition — that food is a "bargain" — to explain rising prices.

The agriculture minister, Akerman said, is "barnstorming the country posing as a friend of the farmer and is pushing the oft-repeated refrain that food prices are low and that prices have to rise to provide a better return for the farmer."

All the minister is accomplishing is turning farmers and consumers against each other and obscuring "the real culprits in the food price controversy."

While the farmer needs more money, increasing the cost of food to the consumer is not the answer, Akerman said.

To aid both groups, the government should "control the portion of the food dollar which is being consumed by the packing and farm supply sectors."

Rail Gas Decision by Year End

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday the government expects to be able to make a decision by the end of the year on whether Arctic natural gas can be shipped south by railway.

He made the statement in the Commons as he answered a barrage of questions about a draft report on a proposed pipeline along the Mackenzie River valley. The report was given to news outlets Monday night by a man who did not identify himself.

The government rejected several opposition attempts to get the report. It says the pipeline would have relatively little employment and revenue benefit for Canadians. Opposition MPs want the report sent to Commons committee along with any other reports the government may have.

The report says the greatest possible gains for Canada during pipeline construction would be $5.3 billion of additional Canadian incomes and 420,000 man-years of additional employment.

During operations the maximum benefits to Canada would be additional incomes of $366 million a year, of which government revenues would comprise $73 million, and 150 to 200 permanent jobs.

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain), the Conservative pipeline critic, took issue with some of the report's conclusions.

When considering employment, jobs in Canadian steel industry and iron mining industry must be taken into account, he said.

He said the capital needed for the pipeline can be raised in Canada over four or five years without difficulty. Pipelines were a good investment but tax laws need to be changed so institutional investors such as pension funds can invest in pipeline shares, he added.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker asked Macdonald whether the government is investigating the "efficacy" of a railway that could be built to carry natural gas at the same cost as a pipeline

Macdonald said the government is evaluating a Queens University study that recommended a railway rather than a pipeline. He said he hopes there will be a decision on it by the end of the year.

The report warns that the cost of pipeline operation could include upward pressure on the Canadian dollar, making it difficult for labor-intensive exports to be sold abroad.

It also could result in a "potentially serious" upward pressure on the level of Canadian energy prices.

The report says there likely would be no serious disruption of the Canadian capital market if $500 million was raised to ensure 51 per cent Canadian ownership of the shares of the pipeline.

But it added:

"The achievement of majority equity ownership by Canadians of itself would not likely ensure Canadian financial control of the pipeline company.

"Any employment impact of pipeline construction will be temporary only. Unless projects requiring similar labor skills were developed at an appropriate time, construction of the pipeline would have a stabilizing effect on employment trends in the economy."

The report, marked confidential, was prepared by the economic impact committee on the study group on Northern Oil Development established by the federal government in December, 1968.

Prepared under the direction of H. G. R. Taylor of the finance department, it is dated Oct. 6, 1972.

Taylor was not available for comment. Nor was Jack Austin deputy minister of energy, mines and resources, chairman of the task force.

The study group is made up of Austin, H. B. Robinson, deputy minister of northern development, Robert Shaw, deputy environment minister, O. G. Stoner, deputy transport minister, and R. D. Howland, chairman of the National Energy Board.

BABY BONUS HANGUP

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation increasing family allowances is "not as simple as it might appear" and probably will not be ready before the first part of June, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday.

He told the Commons committee on health and welfare that about 16 separate items in existing legislation have to be redrafted and the provinces have to be consulted about the wording.

The new legislation, which would be implemented Jan. 1, 1974, will make the average monthly federal family allowance $20 for each child. The provinces can decide how this would be divided, depending on the ages of the children or the size of the family, Lalonde said.

Several Progressive Conservative members of the committee questioned whether this would keep universality in the allowance — meaning that all provinces would pay out the same general amounts.

"You will have universality, but you will not have uniformity," Lalonde replied. "This is a very important development in terms of federal-provincial relations."

Now that the provinces have achieved general agreement on family allowances, the next federal-provincial welfare conference, tentatively scheduled for September, will deal mainly with the Canada Pension Plan, he said.

Asked about giving old-age pensions to those between ages 60 and 65, he said discussions were in a preliminary stage, but agreement was general that this should not be an across-the-board proposal.

Death Ban Favored

OTTAWA (CP) — Refreshed and eager after the Victoria Day weekend, MPs resumed Commons debate Tuesday on capital punishment and prison escapes.

More than a dozen members spoke on the death penalty, most of them favoring a government bill to extend a partial ban until 1977.

Earlier, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand announced tougher rules for prisoners' temporary leaves, the direct result of much criticism in the House.

The capital punishment wrangling appeared no closer to an end after eight full days. Government sources have said the debate might be suspended after today until at least late June so the Commons can get down to bills dealing with corporate income tax, family allowances, pensions and electrical boundaries.

Several dozen MPs still are to speak before an open vote procedes committee consideration of the proposal to retain hanging only for killers of policemen or prison guards.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) said that although 73 per cent of more than 4,000 constituents replied in a questionnaire they were in favor of the death penalty, his conscience would not let him vote this way.

Doug Roche (PC—Edmonton Centre) said his constituents wanted security, not vengeance. He called for a minimum sentence of 25 years without parole for murderers.

Sean O'Sullivan (NDP—Assiniboia), at 21 the youngest MP, said he favors hanging for persons convicted of premeditated murder.

Derek Blackburn (NDP—Brant) said he favored total abolition of the death penalty but would vote for the bill.

Of the 151 persons whose death sentences were commuted between 1920 and 1967— when the first five-year partial ban on the death penalty began—92 per cent never returned to prison, Mr. Blackburn said.

B.C. Trawler Skipper Fined

PORT AUX BASQUES, Nfld. (CP) — Wilfred Ashford of Harbour Breton, Nfld., skipper of the B.C. Packers Co. Ltd. trawler Rupert Brand Seven, was fined $700 Tuesday after being convicted in magistrate's court here of fishing inside the 12-mile limit.

The trawler was apprehended by a fisheries patrol boat in March.

Julie Andrews Places Second To Waltons

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television's biggest success of the season, The Waltons, and its most glamorous failure, The Julie Andrews Hour, dominated the 25th annual Emmy Awards presentations.

The Waltons, the CBS story of a rural Virginia family during the Depression, won six awards Sunday night — including best dramatic series; best actor, for Richard Thomas, best actress, for Michael Learned; and best supporting actress, for Ellen Corby.

Miss Andrew's show, cancelled by ABC because of low ratings, picked up seven awards including best musical variety series and a number for technical aspects. Miss Andrews was reported abroad during the moment of triumph at the Shubert Theatre.

Norman Campbell of the CBC won his second Emmy in three years for his production of the ballet The Sleeping Beauty. The 90-minute color program won as outstanding single program in the field of classical entertainment. Another Emmy went to director Bill Davis, formerly of Toronto, for his work on the Julie Andrews Show.

Thomas, whooping and laughing as he rushed to the stage during the telecast on ABC, said: "While trying to think of something to say if I won, I destroyed my car."

Later, he explained he had wrecked his small foreign car on the way to the theatre.

Michael Learned, whose role in The Waltons is her first television appearance in the U.S., said: "I'm delighted. I'm thrilled. I mas so busy crying and clapping for Richard Thomas, I almost didn't hear my name."

The Emmy from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences for best comedy went for the third year to All in the Family. "I didn't think we'd win again," said producer Norman Lear. "Not that we don't deserve it."

"When Mary Moore and two on her show won, I thought it would go that way."

Jack Klugman, co-star of The Odd Couple, was named the best comedy actor for his portrayal of a sloppy sports-writer. He won for the same role in 1971.

Another major winner was Liza with a Z. The NBC special starring Liza Minnelli was named best single variety show. It previously won a Peabody Award.

When Emmy presenter David Frost read the name of the winner for best variety, he said "He's done it again." He was referring to Bob Fosse, producer-director and choreographer of the Liza show.

So far this year, Fosse has won the Peabody, two Tonys for Broadway's Pippin and an Oscar for directing Cabaret.

America, the 13-part reflection on the United States by Alistair Cooke, was named the outstanding new series. The show, also a Peabody winner, was produced by the BBC.

Another BBC show, Tom Brown's Schooldays, was named outstanding limited series. Its Star, Anthony Murphy, was named best actor in a limited series.

Susan Hampshire, who has won two Emmys previously, was named best actress in a limited series, the BBC's Vanity Fair. Both series were aired on Masterpiece Theatre on PBS.

Tim Conway was selected best supporting player in a variety show for an appearance on the Carol Burnett Show.

Emmys for outstanding children's programming went to Sesame Street; Zoom; the writers of The Electric Co.; the ABC Afterschool Special, the Last of the Curlews; and to Shari Lewis for A Picture of Us.

In sports, Emmys went to ABC's Wide World of Sports for its coverage of the Olympics at Munich, to ABC commentator Jim McKay for the Olympics and to the videotape editor for the Olympics coverage for ABC.

The Sleeping Beauty of PBS was named the outstanding classical music program.

In daytime programming, Emmys were presented to The Edge of Night and Dinah's Place, starring Dinah Shore.

Family Firm? Don't Run It

TORONTO (CP) — Waverley Wilson, the 71-year-old head of Charles Wilson Ltd., soft-drink bottlers, has one piece of advice for anyone offered the chance of running a family business: Don't do it.

Mr. Wilson was discussing the reasons for his company's decision to sell out to Crush International Ltd.

"When you run a familly business it's inevitable that over the years the shares get into the hands of relatives of relatives, relatives by marriage and all that.

"Some of these people don't give a damn about the company's operations and traditions. All they do is pester and plague the guy who's trying to make it all go."

Mr. Wilson said it was often necessary to give children of relatives jobs when they wanted one and then find they couldn't be fired.

"Never hire anybody you can't fire," is his advice.

Mr. Wilson also said a widely held private company also hinders a company's growth.

"It was almost impossible to get the shareholders to agree on anything."

In addition, running a family company requires extra caution due to the close scrutiny of some suspicious shareholders.

"Lots of times I paid my own expenses on important business trips just for that reason," he said.

However, Crush International Ltd., the company which recently purchased Wilson's, feels its prospects for the future are good.

Chairman Jack Thompson said Wilson's loss position "is peanuts" and predicted the company will soon be back on a profitable basis.

Mr. Wilson said the company, which is 130 years old, has had several takeover proposals.

"We've had many takeover offers in the past, some from the U.S., but the price offered wasn't good enough. This one was."

Crush International said it will continue to market Wilson beverages under the firm's name.

"We'll operate Wilson the same way we do our Pure Spring division in Ottawa, which also makes competing products under its own name."

Mr. Wilson said he regrets being unable to continue a family tradition which was started 130 years ago.

"I wish we could have continued in the same old tradition. . . . but there was no way it could be done."

Ottawa Also Lashed In Jailing of Trio

BRUSSELS (CP) — The World Confederation of Labor has included the Canadian federal government as well as Quebec in a protest of the province's latest move in the case of three union leaders who were imprisoned there.

The freedom granted the three "is still only partial and will be subject to certain conditions until September next," says the Brussels-based confederation, which says it has 14 million affiliated members in many parts of the globe.

"The conditions which have been imposed will still limit and threaten the freedom of expression and action of the presidents of the three trade union organizations," the group says in a statement.

Pledging continued protest against the situation, the confederation says:

"The Quebec government has ... shown that it has yielded to the pressure of the great American firms and to the most reactionary capitalist interests, and this with the apparent complicity of the Canadian federal government."

The organization again expresses its solidarity with the three union leaders — Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau — and reaffirms "its total determination to continue the struggle begun on all levels for the repeal of the sentences pronounced against the three, the militants and the trade unions."

Chilling Indictment Of Greed?

By WILLIAM SCALLY

WASHINGTON (Reuter)—In the autumn of 1969 butterflies invaded Trinidad, giant snails infested Miami and globules of sticky spider webbing floated across Missouri "causing general consternation."

The three events were among scores reported to the Smithsonian Institution's centre for short-lived phenomena. Through a network of world correspondents, the centre keeps a watchful eye on strange, often inexplicable and sometimes catastrophic happenings on earth.

A collection of reports made to the centre during the first four years of its existence—1968 to 1971—has been published by the institution under the title The Pulse of the Planet.

From the 300 original correspondents recruited by the centre, the number has grown to more than 2,500 in 150 countries.

The reports told of the killing of 40 million fish by chemicals in the Rhine in 1969; a plague of millions of mice that overran Victoria and New South Wales, Australia, in December, 1969, and the Bay of Bengal tidal wave that killed half a million people in November, 1970.

A foreword stated that The Pulse of the Planet may be interpreted "as a frightening record of natural disasters, as a chilling indictment of human folly and greed, or as the first overview of the earth."

A report on the Miami snail plague said giant African snails, introduced to the area several years earlier, had proliferated over 400 acres in the city, devouring any form of green vegetable they could find.

The snails have no natural enemies in Florida and reproduce at an alarming rate, the report said, noting that the life span of a snail is about five years and that each was able to produce 400 to 600 offspring a year.

KILLED WITH POISON

To fight the plague, state officials baited the area with poison and killed 17,000 snails by the end of 1969. The report warned that the snail population had not been eradicated and that "another outbreak or re-infestation of snails remains an annual threat."

No emergency action was apparently required in Trinidad, where large swarms of butterflies seemed confused by abnormal weather and hatched in great numbers.

A St. Louis invasion came from an unusually large number of balloon spiders. The females of this species lay their eggs in webs at the tops of trees to be carried away by the wind.

On the afternoon of Oct. 8, 1969, "enormous numbers of eggs wafted across St. Louis," the report said.

"At the height of the invasion, the air over the city was filled with the webs at a density of almost one per square foot."

CURIOUS CATALOGUE

Other reports that flowed in to the centre at Cambridge, Mass., were of 71 volcanic eruptions, 86 earthquakes, 51 oil spills, 40 fireball events, 15 meteorite falls and 137 "ecological events including major animal mortalities, migrations, infestations and population fluctuations, major vegetation mortalities and major pollution events."

Stamp Honors P.E.I. Centennial

OTTAWA (CP) — An eight-cent stamp commemorating the 100th anniversary of Prince Edward Island's entry into Confederation will be issued June 22, the post office announced today.

The province's coat of arms — three small oak trees under one large oak tree — will be depicted in two colors on the stamp.

The seventh province to enter Confederation, P.E.I. is celebrating its centennial this year.

POLICEMEN REACH OUT IN HALIFAX

HALIFAX (CP) — The man in charge of the Halifax police department's mounted patrol says it's doing a valuable public relations job for the force.

Sgt. Joseph E. Power says people who normally wouldn't get a chance to talk to policemen on motorcycles or in cars, often walk up to the mounted officers for a chat.

"In this way people, and particularly children, get to know the officers as they make their rounds of school grounds and eventually think of them as friends instead of someone who should be feared."

Urey: At 80 and Very Busy

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — On the calendar is written "Houston this week and a conference aboout the moon."

In June, Barcelona and the origins of life. In August, Australia and the solar system. . . .

A dozen other invitations on Harold C. Urey's desk are impossible to accept. He is 80, and the demands on his time seem to be growing.

"I feel a bit fragile," said Urey in an interview. "I still go down the stairs, all five floors, but I take the elevator up."

A one-time Indiana farm boy, he has been a working professor and scientist since the University of Montana appointed him in 1919. At the age of 38, he discovered heavy hydrogen, the substance that combines with oxygen to make heavy water—the essential ingredient of the hydrogen bomb.

WON NOBEL PRIZE

The Nobel Prize was awarded Urey for that discovery in 1934, and the honors, awards from governments and special degrees still come. His secretary recently counted 30 such medals and awards and 16 honorary degrees, including nine from foreign countries.

Among the latest, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration honored Urey for "pioneering cosmo-chemistry theories of the origin and history of the moon, the meteorites and the planets . . . and for major experimental contributions of the theories of the origin of life on earth and elsewhere in the universe."

Life wherever it exists is as close to the white-haired Urey as the orchids and peace roses which he nurses with a painter's touch in the backyard of the home where he and his wife, Frieda, have lived since 1959.

OPPOSES NIXON

In the same breath in which he talks of eons of time—he believes man's solar system began as a huge gaseous mass, contracting as the sun formed in the centre, throwing off goblets of gas and solids that collided as planets—Urey is a modern man.

The rear bumper of his 1967 model car displays this sticker: "Don't blame me. I voted for McGovern." The Nixon administration's cuts in scientific research funds have saddened him, and he thinks the American people have allowed rioting by "a small handful" of activist college students in the 1960s to permit this.

"The social problems in the United States today are not just going to go away," Urey said. "All the people—American Indians, blacks, Mexicans, Chinese, Japanese or any other—are eventually going to be brought into this society by one method or another.

"And we had better try our best to make all of our people the best kind of people we possibly can."

Urey, who served as one of three program chiefs of the Manhattan Project from which the atomic bomb grew, believes "it's a very bad mistake to cut back on education so rapidly . . . I don't understand it at all."

Although he often laments that the hydrogen bomb was developed as a result of his discovery, Urey says another country would have done it later and heavy hydrogen "may allow us to have the fuel of the future, someday, possibly furnishing power for man for up to five billion years."

More Hikers Head for the Hills

An increasing number of people appear to be turning their backs on over-crowded provincial parks and heading for the Island's wilderness areas on holidays and weekends.

Ron McKee, who runs Camp Ross at Bamfield, said there were 390 registered hikers on the trail during the weekend.

"There was only a trickle of hikers for the same period last year," he said.

Since the start of the year 500 people have walked all or part of the trail.

"We even had hikers in January," he said. "I hate to think of the number of hikers who will be on the trail this summer."

Camp Ross, operated by the Shantymen's Christian Association, has constructed and operates an information booth for hikers. Bamfield is one of the main accesses to the trail

The other accesses are via Nitinat Lake and Port Renfrew. No count of hikers is being taken from these points.

The Camp Ross information booth is proving useful for hikers and people who come unprepared to walk the 45-mile trail.

McKee said some people turn back when they are told they are not properly shod or equipped for hiking.

"We often run across people who are wearing ordinary shoes and only have a day's supply of food with them," he said. "Some people have completely lost touch with nature. They expect to find hot-dog stands en route."

Hikers obtain information at new Camp Ross booth

Camp Ross also is fully equipped for first aid in the event of an accident on the trail. McKee's wife, Joan, is a St. John Ambulance first aider.

Jim McAlonan, who mans the information booth, said many hikers complain of motorcycles using the first six miles of the trail. This is the only section which is accessible to vehicles of this type.

Many walkers also would like to see people travelling in smaller groups, he said.

"There shouldn't be more than four or six to a party. There isn't much sense of going to a wilderness area with a large group. You lose the wilderness experience."

McAlonan said people also should carry litter bags and carry their refuse out with them.

Strathcona Park also was used by an increasing number of back packers over the weekend, but provincial park officials said no count was taken.

MARINA STEP CLOSER

The proposed $1.2 million West Bay Marina moved a step closer to construction Tuesday when Esquimalt council approved a land use contract for the project.

The marina development will be discussed at a public hearing June 11 at 7 p.m. in Esquimalt council chambers.

The development, which will include a restaurant, cocktail lounge and 28 "boatel" units as well as a marina, is to be built near the junction of Head and Lyall.

Developer is John Melnyck.

Council has stipulated no building permit be issued for construction of the complex until 60 per cent of the floats for the marina are constructed and installed.

Council also passed three bylaws Tuesday raising by 20 per cent municipal building permit fees, electrical fees and plumbing and sewer permit fees.

The hikes are the first in the municipality since 1969.

Council will meet in special session Thursday to give final reading to the bylaws so the fee hikes can go into effect June 1.

At the urging of Mayor Art Young, council agreed to write the Canadian Radio and Television Commission expressing support for establishment of a CBC-TV production station in Victoria on Channel 10.

CRTC hearings on the CBC proposal for Channel 10 will take place in Vancouver starting June 11.

"I am convinced that it is to the benefit of Greater Victoria that we get the CBC station here," said Young.

In other business, council:

—Approved a $250 grant to Operation Track Shoes, a two-day field meet at Centennial Stadium next month for handicapped people.

—Heard from treasurer Peter Cairns that its $950,000 loan application for an activities centre has received provincial and federal approval.

Years of Garden Beauty From Potted Easter Lily

The white lilies which bloomed so beautifully in pots for Easter week will give years of garden beauty if given a chance.

These are true lilies, having scaly bulbs and leafy stems bearing the blooms. Usually they are Lilium longiflorum (long flowers) apparently the Croft variety, with short stems and compact growth so suitable for potted plants in the home.

To bloom at Easter, the bulbs are subjected to pre-cooling as an inducement to start root action when potted 10 weeks before flowering is wanted. Normally, these lilies open their first blooms in the garden during the period of July 1 to 10. The bulbs increase in size and then in numbers so that one bulb planted out from a pot in time become many bulbs with many flowers.

Now that the flowers have finished on your potted plant, but then leaves and stem are still green and healthy, give the plant a good watering before removing it intact from the pot.

If you are new to potted plants, it may help to know that you invert the pot over the palm of the left hand with the stem of the plant between the first and second fingers.

Tap the rim of the pot sharply on the corner of a table or bench, lift the pot away with the right hand. The rootball will be complete with soil and roots, upside down on the left palm.

Now, previous to this you will have selected a sunny spot for the lily in a well drained shrub bed, where the root area will be shaded by neighboring low growing shrubs ye the lily stem and flowers will come up into sunshine for at least half of each day.

The soil needs to be full of humus. You ca nadd bonemeal too, a handful mixed with the soil. Have the mixture damp, the hole about six inches deep and wide enough to take the rootball without breaking it down .Two inches of soil over the top of the rootball will be about right.

Fill in around the rootball, water well again, and leave the plant to mature .The leaves and stem will probably die down in June this year but give you a surprise by sending up a flower stem in September. If it does, take off the flower buds after they attain their size. Open them indoors in water. You will only drain the bulb of food by allowing them to open on the plant.

The leaves and stem will again die down, this time for the winter. In spring, new growth should appear and bear flowers for you in July.

If you don't get a flower this fall, don't worry for they will be better than ever next July.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There are those evenings when, in the middle of play, it becomes obvious to a defender that he is fighting a losing cause; and that if declarer is left to his own resources, the contract will be fulfilled. In these circumstances, deception becomes the defenders' sole hope.

Such was the case in today's deal, in which the defenders' deception paid a dividend.

♣ 10 6 4 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

The nine of diamonds was played from dummy on the opening lead, and East won the trick with his ace. East returned a heart, South's ace winning.

Declarer next cashed both his queen of diamonds and his king of hearts, after which he played the ace of trumps. He then led the trump queen, putting West into the lead. West now paused to analyze the situation at hand.

It was perfectly obvious to West that declarer had no losers in the red suits. And further, the defenders had no more trump tricks coming to them, since South certainly figured to possess the jack of trumps (if South's trump suit had been headed by only the A-Q, he almost surely would have entered dummy via the king of diamonds to take a finesse in trumps). So the defenders' only hope of defeating South's game contract was for them to make two club tricks.

West realized that declarer could always make two club tricks out of dummy's king and queen by leading clubs out of the South hand. Declarer, of course, did not know this, since, from his position, East might have the club ace. thus West concluded that the only chance the defenders had was to talk declarer into thinking that East possessed the club ace.

After winning his trump king, West led the seven of clubs — and declarer decided that West wouldn't be that "silly" to be underleading the ace of clubs. However, West might well be leading away from his jack of clubs.

Hoping that the latter was the case, the three of clubs was played from dummy (if West had possessed the club jack, South would have two club winners; and his fourth club would be discarded on the board's high king of diamonds).

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 1388 for the game today. Two 8s, one 1, and one 3. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget both types of decimals, powers and roots (no extra digits).

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 112. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Yesterday's answer:
BABY was 1512.

They're Just as Vicious in Own Backyard

A Reuter correspondent spent a week in the black ghettoes of New York City and found that while white reaction to crime in the streets centres on suspicion of blacks, the inhabitants of the ghettoes also live in fear.

By LARS-ERIK NELSON

NEW YORK (Reuter) — When they come down the street, wearing sneakers, hands jammed in their denim trousers or the pockets of black, fake-fur jackets, with the funny, puffy billed caps perched sideways or backwards on top of their Afro haircuts and their eyes hard eyes have a right to be — the street-wise New Yorker gets out of their way.

The hard-eyed youths are all over New York. They invade subway trains in gangs — sometimes robbing the passengers, Jesse James-style during the seven minutes it takes the A train, the Eighth Avenue express, to get from 59th Street to 125th Street, the main street of Harlem.

They prowl outside the supermarkets, watching through the windows for women who receive substantial amounts of change. They wait outside the banks when the welfare cheques are cashed.

In white areas of the city, the hard-eyed kids in sneakers — felony shoes, the police call them — are conspicuous.

Plainclothes anti-crime teams spot them and follow them, waiting for them to strike.

When they do, they are caught, thrown to the ground, handcuffed and arrested.

But in black areas of the city, they are not conspicuous. The anti-crime teams are virtually powerless — how do you follow a population? And in black areas, the hard-eyed kids strike just as viciously as they do against whites.

Various black militants and nationalists over the years have tried to direct the frustration and violence of young blacks against whites only.

And robbers will say to their victims "I'm only doing this because of what white honkies have done to me and my people," the mugging of a white becomes a blow for justice.

MENACED BY KIDS

A group of black youths who surrounded me during a post-midnight riot in the Queens ghetto of South Jamaica were pathetically eager to explain how their throwing of bricks and bottles was justified retaliation for the shooting of a 10-year-old black boy by a policeman.

One youth told me defiantly:

"And any white man that comes through here, we drag him out of his car and stomp him half to death. Hit him so bad if he don't get straight to a hospital, he'll die.

"Why shouldn't we? It's retaliation."

When the chips are down and he really needs money for drugs, or new clothes, or food, or just a movie, even the "socially conscious, politically aware" mugger will rob an elderly black woman on a lonely Harlem side street.

The young man who regards himself as a black Robin Hood when he holds up a white man will, when he gets desperate, hide in a stairwell on a Friday night and rob a black man coming home from work with his pay.

He will steal and sell his father's car radio, his older brother's tape recorder.

This is the reason for a phenomenon that astonishes many outsiders the first time they visit some of the poorer Harlem tenements: even members of a family put locks on the doors to their rooms.

Last year an election year in which the Democratic party did its best to depict Richard Nixon as the enemy of peace and progress and civil rights, a black woman living in the ghetto was quoted by a black writer as saying: "My main enemy isn't Richard Nixon. My main enemy is the male, black teenager."

KIDS HATE POLICE

The young black criminals regard the police as their ememy in a war. This view, born of decades of oppression that a few years of relative understanding have done little to soften, is reinforced by so-called black exploitation films, in which black heroes defeat and outwit and overpower venal, corrupt, brutal white policemen.

The Amsterdam News, a black-owned weekly newspaper, said in a front-page editorial, "To a Cop on his Beat":

"Be assured that the loud-mouthed vocal minority on the corners who boo and jeer you when you lock up a criminal are not representative of the hard-working people watching from their apartment windows — people who are afraid to come down on the corner for fear of being mugged or robbed.

"The vast majority in our communities want to come back to the streets of Harlem.

They want to sit on their stoops again when the sun is shining. They want to stroll down the avenues unmolested. They want to attend prayer meetings at night. In short, they want to liberate themselves from the jails of their own homes."

Police make scores of arrests every day for possession of drugs. But they seldom manage to get major or even relatively minor dealers. If they do catch an addict pusher, he can avoid a prison sentence by checking into a rehabilitation centre.

Prostitution arrests are rare. The vice squad — known as "the pussy posse" — makes occasional raids. But there is some public sentiment for allowing the girls to ply their trade. Prostitution is a better outlet than rape in a community where large numbers of single men live alone.

There were 117 homicides last year in the 28th precinct, one of three central Harlem police districts. None made the front pages and there was no public pressure to solve them and no public recognition for the detectives who did solve them.

Yet detectives who tracked down the killers of a white university professor and a pretty school teacher found their pictures and names splashed in the newspapers.

8 CARD OF THANKS

I should like to take this opportunity to thank all my friends of Qualicum Beach and Victoria, for their cards, gifts and kind thoughts during my stay in hospital. Particular thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Lonelock, San Leandro, California. Mrs. Margaret Rockett; Mrs. Doris MacKay, Mr. Jack Stidston, Mrs. L. Stidston, Roland Ferris and his mother, Mrs. Ferris, Mr. Jack Bennett, Herold Rourke, all of Victoria for their many visits. Special thanks to Dr. Jock Macdonald and the Rev. B. Cowan of Qualicum Beach. Dr. Chang, the nurses and staff of the Veterans' Hospital for their care and attention. Sincere thanks to Mrs. Terry Detwiller and Mr. and Mrs. Handberg for their driving Jen to the hospital to visit me. My heartfelt thanks to you all.—A.H. James

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends and relatives who gave their expressions of kindness and sympathy during the illness and death of my beloved wife, Mary Sutherland Gamble. Special thanks to Dr. William Graham, Dr. N. S. Lockyer and Nurses and Staff of the Victoria General Hospital.—George McDonald Gamble.

8 CARD OF THANKS

At sometime or other, the thought that we would suffer the loss of a loved one occurred to us, but we little realized the extent of sympathetic understanding that would exist. The many helpful acts and understanding words, of relatives, friends and neighbors, after the sudden loss of our beloved son and brother Gordon; the services of the pallbearers (Gordon's dear friends) Bill Murphy, Sean Murphy, Kevin Murphy, Derek Soltys, John Songhurst and Joe Sperrow; all are blended into a beautiful and heart-warming memory that we will cherish forever!—Allen, Geraldine and Greg Pike.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends who gave their kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during the illness and recent death of our beloved wife, mother and grandmother, Mrs. Alice E. Crozier. Special thanks to Dr. D. M. Whitley and Dr. E. Powell, the staff of Royal Jubilee Hospital, 2nd floor central. — John Crozier and Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

LUSSE — In loving memory of my beloved father, James Clifford, who passed away May 23, 1959.
So loved—So sadly missed.
—Your loving daughter, Deenie.

Drug Problems Analysed

"The Treatment of Drug Abuse" is the title of a big book which should be of interest to parents, educators, and judges concerned with this great problem.

The authors, all experts in the field, describe what has been accomplished in various outstanding drug programs throughout the country, such as Beth Israel Center, New York City; Daytop Village, New York City; the California Civil Addict Program; the Illinois Drug Abuse Program; Teen Challenge of Northern California and Nevada; the Drug Dependency Treatment Program, St. Louis; the Connecticut State Program; the Connecticut Mental Health Centre, New Haven; and the Mendocino State Hospital, Talmage, Calif.

Daytop Village is described, because it is the oldest of the therapeutic communities that attempt to help drug addicts to return to the general society and remain drug-free there. It was begun in 1963, as a treatment centre for convicted male addicts on probation. Today at Daytop, after years of trial and error, the addict is segregated from the outer world for a while. He enters a special community in which at first he is considered a baby who has never learned to take responsibility. At first, great emphasis is placed on his immaturity.

The idea is that in Daytop, people will be more understanding and more loving that those in the outside world, and the addict will "grow up" all over again, strengthened by the honesty and love he receives from his fellow members. The hope is that when he does leave Daytop Village, he will be more able to handle the problems he must face.

If the addict is able to complete the program and remain entirely drug-free, he is a success. If he returns to the use of any illegal drugs, even on rare occasions, he is considered a failure.

The authors tell how a person can get into the program at Daytop (or any of the other programs described), and there are detailed descriptions of the facilities and methods of therapy.

GALLUP POLL

Most Approve North Pipeline

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Most Canadians (53%) have heard or read nothing about the controversy surrounding the proposed Mackenzie Valley pipeline. Less than half (47%) say they know something about it. Interest is highest in Ontario and the West, where in each case 57% know of it, compared to 43% who do not.

Three in four of the Quebec population know nothing about it. In the Maritimes the segments are almost equal.

Among those men and women who are aware of it, a bare majority (51%) think it would be a good thing for Canada. Asked why they hold this view, they respond with two main beliefs — that it would help the economy, and unemployment, or that it would be a better system than tanking supplies down the B.C. coast, incurring the danger of pollution. Most of those who approve, do so on the understanding that Canada build, control and manage the pipeline.

Among those who know of the project, about one in five (21%) predict it would be a bad thing for the nation, mainly because they fear that the U.S. would gain too much control. "We would be providing a gas line for the U.S." summarizes their opinion.

The study was conducted in early March with a national, random sample of 713 adults, in at-home, personal interviews. A sample of this size is accurate within a 4 percentage point margin of error, 19 out of 20 times.

The question:

"DO YOU HAPPEN TO HAVE HEARD OR READ ANYTHING ABOUT THE PROPOSED MACKENZIE VALLEY NATURAL GAS PIPELINE?"

The table below compares national and regional viewpoints.

	YES	NO
NATIONAL	47%	53%
Maritimes	46	54
Quebec	24	76
Ontario	57	43
West	57	43

Those who had heard of the proposed pipeline were asked:

"IS IT YOUR IMPRESSION THAT, IF BUILT, THIS PIPELINE WOULD BE A GOOD THING OR A BAD THING FOR CANADA?"

	NATIONAL
A good thing	51%
A bad thing	21
Qualified	5
Undecided	23

Because of the smaller number of respondents in some of the subsegments who had heard of the pipeline, a number of them cannot be reported with sufficient accuracy. However in Ontario, 45% said "Good" and 24% "Bad." In the West the levels were 57% to 17%. In Quebec approval is about three times as high as opposition. In the Maritimes attitudes are divided about evenly.

Younger Canadians, under 30, are more likely to see the project as a good one (57%) than those over fifty (51%). Women are more undecided on the matter, and less likely to approve it (43%) than men (51%). Labor thinks it will be good (54%) more than executives and professional people (43).

CANCER NOW LINKED TO SACCHARIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal report strengthens the link between cancer and saccharin, the only artificial sweetener remaining on the market since cyclamate was banned.

The Food and Drug Administration said it will not move against the sugar substitute until it receives a recommendation from the National Academy of Sciences.

Virgil Wodicka, director of FDA's bureau of foods, said the pathology report on the agency's two-year rat feeding studies shows "presumptive evidence" that saccharin caused cancerous bladder tumors in three of 48 rats fed saccharin as 7.5 per cent of their total diet.

"The first question we've posed to the academy is, 'Is it really cancer'?" Wodicka said. "Second, if it is cancer, 'Did saccharin induce it'?"

A six-member academy sub-committee on non-nutritive sweeteners plans to assemble again in mid-June.

Cod: Iceland's Case for Nationalism

By MARTIN WOOLLACOTT
Manchester Guardian

REYKJAVIK — Britain tends to view the Cod War with Iceland as an unfortunate quarrel about jurisdiction with a small and obstinate European country that happens to be unusually dependent on fishing.

In fact, the Cod War — to which British trawlers have returned after a tactical but damaging retreat last Thursday — is more rapidly understandable as one of the continuing series of conflicts between the developed and the underdeveloped world over raw materials and resources.

Iceland's Scandinavian culture, her membership in NATO, and her current high standard of living, all tend to obscure the fact that in many ways Iceland belongs to the Third World.

Few other parts of Europe are so under-industrialized or so dependent on imports from the major capitalist countries.

None, except Ireland, has so recently emerged from colonial status.

"The danges started to soften up around the turn of the century," one diplomat comments, "but before that they ran Iceland as a colony pure and simple, complete with a commercial monopoly for Danes. This is an ex-colony. It is as well to remember that sometimes."

This consciousness of being underdeveloped, of standing in a dangerously dependent relationship to the big Western countries, accounts for the passion which Icelanders feel over the fishing limits issue — and for much else in Icelandic politics.

Iceland regards the fish off her shores rather as Libya regards its oil — as her only real resource, her only guarantee of economic security, and her only hope for development in the future. Thus the extension of the limits to 50 miles has been basically an act of unilateral nationalization — more akin to the revolt of the Central American banana republics against United Fruit.

Iceland's predilection for unilateral action so unusual in a Scandinavian country has not been confined to the fisheries issue.

Iceland began life as an independent nation by rather perversely declaring independence from Denmark when it was clear that that country would have happily conceded it after purely formal discussions.

And at this moment the Icelandic government appears committed to what amounts to unilateral action over the Keflavik NATO base at a time when the other NATO countries are engaged in the delicate task of working out a joint approach for the forthcoming forces reductions talks with the Soviet Union.

"Are we to be a country which follows the international way, which tries to settle things in co-operation with other countries? Or are we to go on surprising other countries with these sudden decisions?" Bjorn Bjarnasson, a young member of Iceland's most conservative party, told me: "That's a question we have not yet decided."

Its recent annual conference ducked the question of whether Iceland should send a representative to The Hague on the fisheries issue simply because it was felt a decision might split the party.

Indeed, the central issue of Icelandic politics since the war has been to what extent Iceland should integrate itself into the larger Western world, with the right-wing parties arguing for cooperation, and the left wing parties verging toward isolationism.

Magnus Kjartansson, the Communist minister of industry in the present government, says: "Western capitalism is as dangerous for us as for other underdeveloped countries, much more dangerous than our own class of petty capitalists . . . political and economic independence has been our main problem for the past 20 to 30 years."

The fifty-mile limit has thus become the focus of all Iceland's fears and worries about its survival as an independent nation and culture, and it is as angry about Britain stealing its cod as any black African country denouncing neo-colonialism.

CAYER BILLED FOR TRIP

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says Marc Cayer, a prisoner of the North Vietnamese for five years, has been billed $1,275 by the federal government which returned him to Canada from Hanoi earlier this year.

The newspaper says a copy of the bill, sent to Mr. Cayer by the external affairs department, has been made available to it.

Items for which the 30-year agronomist from St. Raymond, Que., is being charged The Star says, include air travel, cost of meals in Hanoi and Saigon, $32.54 for the suit, tie and socks given him to replace his prison clothes.

The Star says a letter was sent Mr. Cayer on May 1 asking him to settle the April 5 bill as soon as possible so department accounts could be made up to date.

Mitchell Sharp, external affairs minister, told the Commons Feb. 12 that Mr. Cayer's travel expenses would be covered by the government. The same arrangement would apply for Lloyd Oppel, a 21-year-old missionary from Courtenay, B.C., also a prisoner of the North Vietnamese.

Oppel was taken to the United States in a U.S. aircraft and then transported home by a Canadian Armed Forces aircraft. The Star quotes Oppel in an interview Tuesday as saying he has received no bill from the Canadian government.

Cayer flew from Hanoi to Saigon aboard an International Commission of Control and Supervision aircraft and from Saigon to Chicago on commercial flights. He travelled from Chicago to Quebec City in a federal government jet.

Heath Orders Scandal Probe

Times News Services

Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath has called an emergency meeting of his top advisers to investigate reports of a vice scandal in his cabinet.

Scotland Yard is pressing a full investigation and informed sources said MI-5, the government counter-espionage agency, has been ordered to check whether national security has been compromised through brothel assignations following the resignation of a junior minister in Heath's cabinet Tuesday.

It is exactly 10 years since the Profumo sex scandal shook the British government.

Junior cabinet minister Lord Lambton, who was under-secretary of defence for the RAF, today admitted to "a casual acquaintance with a call girl" but denied newspaper reports that national security is imperilled by the involvement of high-ranking officials in an international vice ring.

"There has been no high-life vice ring, no security leak, no blackmail; and so far as I know, no politician from any party is remotely concerned with these events."

Within hours the office of Attorney General Sir Peter Rawlinson announced that summonses alleging illegal possession of dangerous drugs have been issued against Lambton. It said he is being charged with possession of marijuana and amphetamines.

The Evening Standard of London said special agents for three weeks have been investigating sensational allegations "about vice ring improprieties involving government ministers and other figures." It said at least one other government minister was involved.

ADMITS 'STUPIDITY'

The London Evening News said the girl was a black call girl named "Betty" and that a man calling himself her husband tried to sell "incriminating photographs" of the girl and Lambton to a British newspaper for $25,000.

The Daily Mirror says one source close to the top level of the government told it that Scotland Yard's file on the matter was "dynamite."

"I behaved with credulous stupidity," said Lambton, 50-year-old father of a son and five daughters, in a press statement.

"This is the sordid story," he said. "All that happened is that some sneak pimp has seen an opportunity of making money by the sale of the story and secret photographs to papers at home and abroad."

He said he has been told the husband of the call girl with whom he was acquainted secretly took some photographs and sold them to newspapers.

Another Conservative government was rocked 10 years ago by the disclosure that its war minister, John Profumo, and a Soviet military attache had slept with the same prostitute, Christine Keeler. No security leak was ever found, but Profumo's political career collapsed in disgrace because he lied to the House of Commons about his connection with Miss Keeler.

The government refused comment on the reports of the new scandal, but the allegations were splashed on front pages of newspapers.

KUWAIT PLACES BIG ARMS ORDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The tiny sheikdom of Kuwait is about to order more than $500 million worth of U.S. tanks, planes, missiles and military construction assistance as the arms race in the oil-rich Persian Gulf continues to expand.

Final arrangements between U.S. and Kuwaiti officials on the arms deal are expected to be made within the next few days.

The sale comes on the heels of about $2.5 billion in U.S. arms sales to Iran over the past 18 months; a $625 million British deal to help Saudi Arabia maintain its air defences; and continuing Soviet shipments of arms to Iraq, which has been feuding with both Kuwait and Iran.

Under the proposed terms of the sale to Kuwait, a country less than half the size of Vancouver Island, the United States will ship some 160 modern M-60 tanks, 32 F-8 Crusader jet fighters, about 1,800 anti-tank guided missiles, more than 150 anti-aircraft missiles of the improved Hawk type and some light helicopters.

Barrett Links Job, Pay Guarantees

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Premier Barrett today proposed development of a "dual strategy of guaranteed jobs and guaranteed incomes."

Barrett, in an opening statement prepared for the premiers' conference proposed a permanent community employment program, tied to a guaranteed income program, higher family allowances and higher pensions.

"We are deeply concerned about the problems we perceive in the present social security system, and believe there is an urgent need to develop effective solutions to these problems."

His proposed community employment program would provide jobs "based on the notion of socially profitable employment in the public sector."

"The government of British Columbia is convinced that we should work toward replacing the present system of social assistance with a guaranteed income plan providing universal access for those persons who lack sufficient resources for a reasonable standard of living."

Barrett proposed sweeping changes in the Canada Pension Plan "so that it will play a central role in Canada's social security system."

Over a three-year period the level of maximum pensionable earnings should be increased "close to $10,000," and the present two-per-cent limit should be removed so pensions can move freely with the consumer price index.

Full retirement benefits should be available at age 60 instead of 65, with a reduced pension available at 55.

This, among other things, would lead to new job openings for younger Canadians.

Gas Hike Asked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. is applying to the National Energy Board for an increase in the domestic rate charged to natural gas utilities in British Columbia.

Kelly Gibson, chairman of the Westcoast board, said at a news conference today that an increase in the rate base and rate of return was needed to meet increased cost of natural gas from the producers and recent tax legislation introduced by the B.C. government.

Gibson said the application represents the first domestic price increase sought by the company in its 16-year history.

"Westcoast has maintained prices at stable and moderate levels for 16 years," he said. "The provincial government is making it impossible to do so any longer.

"The only course open to us is to seek compensation for increased costs over which we have no control."

Williams Cracks At Davis

Resources Minister Bob Williams reacted angrily today to a statement by federal Environment Minister Jack Davis that newsprint and pulp mills owned by the provincial government are among the worst polluters in the province. (See Page 27)

Williams attacked the federal minister for "not having the guts" to deal with the real pollution offenders in B.C., which he said are the multinational corporations based in the U.S.

The worst polluter in B.C., Williams said, is the Rayonier plant at Port Alice, owned by the giant American ITT Corporation.

Williams also said the provincial government had to go it alone in moving to support the economy of the northwestern sector of the province through its purchase of Columbia Cellulose operations in Prince Rupert and the Crown Zellerbach plant at Ocean Falls.

Similar projects in other provinces have been financed by the federal government through the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, Williams said, adding that B.C. was not able to get any money whatsoever from DREE for its takeovers.

Instead, Williams said, Davis has exhibited "political gamesmanship" in his comments about the B.C. mills.

"He's always trying to get a few Brownie points in a penny-ante political game instead of attempting to cooperate with the provincial government," Williams said.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The countdown started today for man's first space salvage operation, with astronauts and space officials confident they can repair the crippled orbiting Skylab and complete a 28-day flight.

Close Camps, Parks Urged

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Pressure is being exerted on the provincial parks department to close down its campsites because of rowdyism and vandalism, parks director Robert Ahrens said today.

"People have requested that we turn over our campsite system to private operators," he said.

I'm against this because it would be a hell of a thing to do—leasing out our campsites to private individuals."

Ahrens said turning over provincial campsites to individuals or companies would be giving "private enterprise a foothold in our parks."

He was commenting on the disturbance in Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach on the Victoria Day weekend and the vandalism in provincial parks during Easter.

He said cost to repair damage caused by vandals in three parks—Goldstream, Bamberton and Mowat Parks—over Easter was $7,000.

"That is only for three parks," he said. "I haven't got the bills for damages to other parks on the island and the mainland."

He said he had a request Tuesday to phase out the campsite at Mowat Park near Ganges on Saltspring Island, and to turn it into a day park.

"I agree with that," he said. "It should be a day park for the local residents."

He said other people have requested we put fences around our campsites to keep out undesirable elements.

"I am opposed to this," he said. "The only answer to vandalism and hooliganism is to impose more stringent park restrictions. This means that a park warden would have the authority to refuse any person whom he thought is undesirable.

"It is not a thing we like to do," he added, "but legitimate campers have to be protected from hooligans."

Ahrens said the trouble in parks is caused by minority groups.

For the most part they are unmotivated young men," he said. "They don't know what to in their spare time, except drive cars, drink and draw attention to themselves."

John Willow, a member of the B.C. Sierra Club conservation committee, said the general public is partly to blame for increased vandalism.

"We are inclined to treat the teaching of recreational skills as a frill," he said. "In Britain and other European countries, recreational skills are considered as important as education."

"The problem of vandalism isn't going to get any better until we take a hard look at our educational system," he added. "There is a lot of educational work to be done in teaching people how to treat

Blacks Gain Right To Strike

JOHANNESBURG — The right to strike is to be restored to black workers in South Africa for the first time in 31 years under a bill published Tuesday by the government of Prime Minister John Vorster.

The legislation, which could be passed through both houses of parliament before the current session ends in mid-June, comes in the wake of government decisions to ease controls on black labor and indications that an increasing number of skilled jobs are no longer being reserved exclusively for whites.

The move to make strikes by black workers legal came as a surprise to industrialists and politicians, but was immediately welcomed as a realistic way of defusing the potentially explosive situation sparked by the wave of strikes that started in Natal province last year and spread in recent weeks to other parts of the country.

The strike clause was not in the draft bill, which was amended in light of warnings from employers and liberal leaders of white unions that some way has to be found of creating effective machinery for communication between employers and black workers.

COFFEE BREAK ROBBERY

CHAPAIS, Que. (CP) — Three armed and masked bandits escaped with $136,000 in cash today after holding up a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in this community, 310 miles north of Montreal.

No shots were fired and no one was injured.

Police said the bank manager and four employees were in a restaurant about 15 minutes before the bank was scheduled to open, when the men, armed with revolvers and machine guns, burst in and took a teller hostage.

One man remained in the restaurant with the teller while the other two herded the manager and three bank employees off to open the bank.

$1,000,000 On the Road

PEARISBURG, Va. (AP) — A bus collided with an armored truck during a heavy rainstorm near here today, killing the driver of the truck and strewing about $1 million over the highway, police said.

LOADED PROTEST OVER USED CAR

LONDON (UPI) — As Raymond Bullard drove his newly-acquired used car home from the showroom, the steering went and a host of other problems cropped up, said his lawyer. The seller refused to do anything about it.

So Bullard, 25, stormed into the show room and tossed a home-made fire bomb. When it failed to ignite he pulled out a sawed-off shotgun and started shooting.

He pleaded guilty to damaging three Jaguars, two Mercedes, an Oldsmobile, a formula four racing car and two other cars.

"A lot of people who buy cars are dissatisfied," said Judge Christmas Humphreys. "But people must not take the law into their own hands." He fined Bullard $500.

'Doing Something for President'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — An ex-White House staffer testified today he felt he was "doing something for the president" when he relayed offers of executive clemency to Watergate conspirator James McCord and that he believed President Nixon knew he was making such offers.

Nixon, meanwhile, disclosed for the first time Tuesday he had ordered his two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, to limit the Watergate investigation.

He said he did it to protect highly sensitive "national security operations" being conducted by the CIA and the White House and not to impede bringing wrong-doers to justice. He denied making, or authorizing anybody to make, clemency offers.

But he conceded that some of his aides probably went beyond his directives and attempted to hide illegal activities which they and others had undertaken on his behalf.

Caulfield, testifying for a second day at the Senate Watergate hearings, said he knew his actions were wrong but that his "loyalty to the President of the United States overrode these considerations."

Caulfield emphasized that he had "no direct knowledge" that Nixon was aware he relayed offers of clemency to McCord at three meetings last January while McCord was on trial for the bugging of Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Caulfield said he had been asked to relay the clemency promises to his old friend McCord by then-White House counsel John Dean, who he said told him to tell McCord the offers were sincere and came from "the highest levels" of the White House.

Caulfield said he believed Dean was acting with proper authority — which could only come from Nixon himself.

The former White House aide said Dean's request plunged him into a deep personal conflict between loyalty to the White House and having to do what he knew was wrong — a criminal act to obstruct justice.

"I know when wrongdoing is occurring," he said. "I knew that (using) executive clemency in this manner was wrong."

Caulfield said that because Dean was involved in the clemency offers, he "assumed there were others in the White House" involved as well, including "conceivably, very conceivably, quite possibly" presidential adviser Ehrlichman.

He said he called Ehrlichman on June 17 — the day McCord and four other men were arrested at the Watergate — after being alerted to the arrests by the secret service, and told him: "John, there sounds like there is a disaster of some type."

He said Ehrlichman told him: "I guess I had better place a call to John Mitchell," the former attorney-general who has Nixon's campaign manager at the time.

McCord has testified he was told Mitchell helped to plan the Watergate bugging. Mitchell has denied the allegations, but has told a grand jury he sat in on three meetings where bugging plans were discussed.

Nixon, declaring he will not resign, issued two statements Tuesday disclaiming any knowledge of, or participation in, illegal activities.

While conceding he is under heavy fire, Nixon said: "I will not abandon my responsibilities. I will continue to do the job I was elected to do."

'She Came at Me With Knife': Jo Ann

"The next thing I knew, she was coming at me with a rolling pin and a knife. The knife went into my hand."

Displaying the scarred hand, 17-year-old Jo Ann Anderson, charged with the non-capital murder of her mother, Shirley, 38, told a Supreme Court jury Tuesday what she remembered the night of her mother's death.

The girl testified she suffered a memory lapse after the attack.

Mrs. Anderson arrived home shortly after 5 p.m., said Jo Anne. "She went out and came back in . . ."

She told the jury she caught only a "glimpse" of her mother before she went out again.

"She came in and said to me 'I put some money in your coat and my credit card so that you can go out tonight and you can have the car and you can get some new clothes.'

"So I said that was fine. She went out and came back in and I believe she had gone to the car, I don't know, to get whatever she got for supper, and she came in and told me to get out and stay out and not to come back.

"And I asked her why, this is my home, this is my home just as much as it's your home, and the only reason why we can stay here is as long as I stay with you, and I haven't done anything.

"The next thing I knew she was coming at me with a rolling pin and a knife, the knife went into my hand . . . The next thing I remember was the car stalling at Cloverdale and Douglas and driving to the police station."

"Did she ever tell you to get out and stay out before?" asked Prosecutor George MacMinn.

The girl replied her mother had asked her to leave on other occasions after an argument but would always apologize moments later.

"Did you ever discuss with your mother the possibility of you being pregnant?" asked MacMinn.

"No," replied Jo Ann.

"You did not say to your mother, on one occasion, that you suspect you might be pregnant but weren't sure?"

"No."

"Jo Ann, have you ever taken drugs?"

"I tried marijuana once."

"Have you ever tried acid?"

"No."

Earlier in the week Jo Ann and a friend, Lori Drage, had made arrangements to go to the Empress Hotel Paint Cellar Friday night.

Before the stabbing Mrs. Anderson gave her daughter the money and keys to her car to go out for the evening.

Jo Ann testified she did not have a driver's licence but had used the car occasionally to run errands.

"Were you a little surprised that your mother offered you the car that night?" asked MacMinn.

"Not really, because she'd let me use it before," she said.

She said it was unusual, however, that her mother had offered the car for the entire evening.

Lori of 1125 Hillside, testified Mrs. Anderson telephoned her during the week of the stabbing and said, "Would you please promise me that you won't come back until five o'clock next Saturday morning."

Lori told the jury she had been to the Anderson's for occasional meals or coffee and had never heard Mrs. Anderson speak unkindly to Jo Ann.

She told the court she'd seen one argument over who was going to cook dinner.

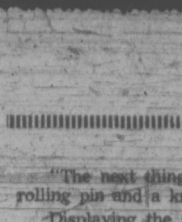

Did Mrs. Anderson, to your knowledge, have any boy friends?" asked MacMinn.

"No."

"Would you agree that Mrs. Anderson was a good mother to Jo Ann?"

"Yes, she was."

Assisting MacMinn is Ted Pollard. Defence counsel are Michael Hutchison and Cecil Branson.

Caught in the Middle —The Witness Dilemma

One of the most interesting aspects of the Watergate hearings so far, to me, has been the performances of the witnesses—not so much in what they've had to say, but in the witness role.

In any such hearing or in any court of law the witness is precisely that in the most elementary theatrical sense: a player on a stage. In some eight years of covering courts it was the thing that fascinated me most. You might meet some nondescript guy out in the hall before the court was called into session only to find him, an hour later, in the box, giving a passable imitation of Alfred Dreyfus. Yet the most articulate of men often seize up in that unaccustomed part and make burbling sounds that could only come from a village idiot.

Unless they are professionals of some sort the witness has nothing in his background or even in his preparation for the event to cause him to perform predictably. More often than not he has never in his life before been such a focal point of attention, yet here he is in the most dramatic position imaginable, actually raised up physically on a kind of platform, every eye and ear — the judge above, the lawyers and spectators below — turned in undivided attention upon him. Small wonder that so many witnesses babble.

I learned in those years of covering the courts that lawyers, however much they may rehearse their clients before their appearance, invariably stress that the worst thing a witness can do is to lie.

It is particularly evident in the Watergate hearings because, of course, the television lens zooms in on the witness and records every tell-tale flick of the eye or pursing of the lips. But it is equally true in a courtroom that a man or woman who twists the truth, or tells something less than it, stands all but nakedly revealed.

It always seemed to me the very essence of incorruptible justice that, though most of us go through our lives as unmitigated social liars, even the mildest fib in a courtroom causes a huge neon sign to balloon above the head of the witness, blinking on the word "Liar!"

The lawyers may not be entirely altruistic in this regard for the truth since they know that there's an adversary there just dying to pounce on the slightest evasion of any salient fact, thus to discredit the whole of the witness' testimony.

In my time as a court reporter I saw many an instance when a witness had told some little white lie, often with no real bearing on the case, that gave a smart lawyer the dry kindling to burn down the entirety of his evidence.

Judges, too, are notorious in cherishing the truth and nothing but the truth, which the witness has solemnly sworn, on an Old or New Testament, to tell, and do not take kindly to anything less.

It is, of course, the adversary system that causes the already bewildered witness to be lead into total bewilderment. In case after case I have seen witnesses who were examined, first, by a sympathetic lawyer, who visibly relaxed and grew in stature, thus leaving them entirely unprepared for the cross-examination by a hostile and frequently terrible-tempered legal beagle who tore off their limbs one by one.

In no other arena of life may a man experience such ego-building and such ego-destruction within a single day and the segue from expansive righteousness to injured and beleaguered innocence is one of life's most awkward transitions.

Even after those years of it as a spectator I never managed to accept the unpleasant tension that is the result of any litigation.

To those who work in the courtroom atmosphere every day it is simply a routine with certain well-defined rules, but the layman is always conscious that men or women are being made to appear incompetent or obtuse or prejudiced or just plain rotten in the interests of arriving at a supportive verdict. It is all very polite, very restrained, very much in control, but blows are being struck and though justice may prevail, as it most often does, it inflicts deep hurts.

The witness, often the innocent in the middle, feels that very directly since he is so painfully aware of the fact that he has little or no control over the conflict, though he is momentarily at the heart of it. In the Watergate hearings, no less than in a local courtroom, the witness takes on the appearance of a live, impaled moth, a horrible sight to see.

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

This boy keeps beating up his younger brother. That girl keeps wetting her bed. This boy can handle his school work easily but won't without constant attention. That girl throws wild temper tantrums when she's teased.

Problems most parents know something about. But problems in these cases which have blossomed into nightmares. These kids are driving their families frantic. In the process they've become tangled in emotional knots.

On the top floor of the Eric Martin Institute, in bright rooms where kids can run and play and work and shout, a new program to put these children and their parents back on the track is showing promising results.

The children's unit, with room for 10 youngsters from infancy to age 15, opened last December, only the second of its kind in B.C.

Clinical director is Dr. Philip Ney, a child psychiatrist. He is full of praise for what he describes as a "bright" young staff, led by head nurse Mrs. Mavis Martin. It includes besides nurses and orderlies, social workers, a psychologist, occupational therapist and a teacher.

The natural ties which bind most parents and children sometimes snap and, reasons aside for the moment, the behavior patterns such children develop—from withdrawl to hyperactivity—can generate a family climate which drives everyone 'round the bend.

Some kids want to scrap continually, some wet beds or soil themselves, some can't keep still, some turn inward, some smash things, some are seasoned liars, some can't stop playing hookey.

Most have big troubles in school—with other kids or teachers or work. One has been suspened from kindergarten.

Boys outnumber girls in the children's unit, about three-to-one. Many of the children come from homes with just one parent. A substantial number, about 12 per cent, of the trouble children are adopted.

They come to live on the sixth floor at EMI for five weeks and most end up reluctant to leave.

The children's unit isn't a place for miracle cures but for turning around family situations which are rolling towards disaster so that—with little pushes from staff and family—they are rolling the other way.

When it works, parents deserve most of the credit, the staff says. It was parents who cared enough to give the unit a try. And inevitably, parents, along with children have to overhaul their views.

The staff conceeds they are not likely to see some of the most disturbed children in the community because their parents don't care. But some have come from up-Island, the lower mainland and the interior.

The sixth floor doesn't look or function in the traditional hospital image. No uniforms for one thing. And there are bedrooms rather than wards, two doubles, one for four (usually younger children) and two singles, with children's, not hospital beds, bright curtains and bathrooms alongside.

Down a hall there is a barren cupboard-like room with window in the door, the so-called "time out room" where a rampaging older child will occasionally be locked for a short spell to cool down.

Ney says the time-out room is used so rarely he can't recall the last time. It's a "last resort" measure, used only when a youngster attacks a staff member or tries to destroy the place.

In general, the children's unit is a place where you can blow your stack without it being held against you.

There is also a 15-passenger bus which takes everyone on frequent outings. Swimming and skating are regular activities as are trips to parks — Beacon Hill, McKenzie Bay, China Beach. The group just got back this week from camping at Goldstream where some of the parents joined in.

Thursdays at suppertime parents come along to a conference room, pour themselves a coffee, and Ney leads a lively discussion on what it's all about.

They look at guidelines which can reasonably be expected of their children, ways to meet and improve on them.

Should two brothers be allowed to fight at all? Not at all, says the mother involved. Other parents suggest that's not reasonable. Everyone is left with something to think about.

School Ultimatum To City

James Bay community school has received a one-month reprieve.

Greater Victoria School Board Tuesday night agreed to delay commencement of working drawings on the project until June 30, giving city council another month to decide whether they wish to join in on construction of facilities.

Last week a school board committee recommended the working drawings be started immediately without proposed community facilities, on the assumption the extra facilities could be added later if the city decided to join.

James Bay Community Association member Lorne De Girolamo appealed to the board, however, to delay the drawings and give the city a deadline.

The board agreed to notify the city "of the urgency concerning its possible participation" in the recreation facilities and to set the June 30 deadline.

MEETING SET UP

As a result of the decision, a meeting was set up this morning between representatives of the city, the board and the community association, to discuss the city's intensions.

The school board plans to build six extra classrooms, a library and activity room at James Bay Elementary in order to accommodate the transfer of all pupils from South Park School, which will be phased out in Sept., 1974.

The community association wishes to make the expanded school a community facility as well, with the addition of three multi-activity rooms, additional library and gym space, and a cafeteria costing $160,000.

The community group needs a commitment from the city to get the necessary funding for the project, and has received council support "in principle."

Before meeting this morning with some aldermen and members of the James Bay Community Association to discuss the porject, Mayor Peter Pollen said city council has discussed participation without reaching any firm conclusions.

He added, however: "Obviously the city can participate only to the extent of its financial ability, which is extremely limited.

"For the city to get into this activity to any significant degree would be beyond our current financial capacity."

Prison Debate Tonight

The drive of Metchosin and Albert Head residents to have William Head penitentiary moved is expected to come to a climax tonight at a mass meeting in Metchosin Community Hall.

The Metchosin Ratepayers' Association and the Albert Head Ratepayers' Association have banded together in an effort to get the prison, due to be upgraded from minimum to medium-security, closed down.

MRA chairman John Waterman said he expects representatives from all political parties to attend the 8 p.m. meeting.

A western region represenative of the federal penitentiary system will also be present.

Action to try and have the penitentiary removed was accelerated May 14 when three people were brutally attacked and hospitalized shortly after Lionel Ernest Blanchard, 32, escaped from the prison.

FIREARMS

He is to appear in Victoria provincial court Thurday on five charges whieh include robbery and violence, assault and causing grievous bodily harm.

Residents on Sandgate, where Colin Bowen was attacked, are planning to arm themselves to protect their families and have asked the RCMP Colwood for instruction.

The MRA and AHRA have asked Solicitor-General Warren Allmand to have the prison moved to Bentinck, Island, site of a former leper colony, just inside Race Rocks.

Waterman said today he has been told that Bentinck was originally considered as a possible site for the prison.

"It was turned down," he said, "because the prison was to be temporary.

"William Head (the former quarantine station) already had the power and water at the standard they needed and it was considered too expensive to bring Bentinck's facilities up to the same standards.

"But they very nearly took Bentinck Island," he added.

Diphtheria Cases Up To 16 in Victoria

The number of people treated for diphtheria in Greater Victoria has risen to 16, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior public health officer, said today.

All have responded successfully to treatment in hospital, he added.

The four latest cases:

Two men, aged 23 and 25, whose symptoms were spotted in a doctor's office Friday.

Two girls, about age 8, who are classified as healthy carriers, meaning they are carrying the germ but not suffering from it. They were spotted in a recent survey in which 600 throat swabs were taken, said Whitbread.

The girls had previously been immunized and were not exhibiting any symptoms of the disease.

Whitbread had said earlier that public health staff were still looking for a healthy carrier responsible for the earlier local cases. But he said today it is very difficult to know whether the carriers have now been found.

Diphtheria immunization is given routinely at all baby clinics and through a program in elementary schools where parents give their permission.

But an outbreak on northern and western Vancouver Island earlier this year has led public health officials to urge parents to make certain their children have been immunized. The metro health board also makes booster shots available for adults at area clinics by appointment.

RECORD ENTRY ON HAND FOR SAILING CLASSICS

A record 24 boats will be pacing it out in the Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classics this weekend.

Deadline for registration was Tuesday and officials of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club expect to be working to midnight, computerising and preparing lists.

The Swiftsure gets under way 9:30 a.m. Saturday off Brotchie Ledge with a start line set between the navy's HMCS Porte de la Reine and the U.S. coast guard's Point Bennett.

The Juan de Fuca boats will ge their start gun 15 minutes later.

Many of the large sailing armada are expected to tie up in the Inner Harbor Thursday, the remainder arriving in time for the Friday evening festivities.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen will welcome the visiting boats, this will be followed by the traditional roll call of boats.

TOT FIGHTS FOR LIFE AFTER JUGULAR CUT

Madeleine Hansen, daughter of Richard and Jean Hansen, 1077 Davie, suffered severe cuts to the jugular vein and head and internal injuries Monday after the three of them went through the windshield of a car in which they were riding.

The child's father, 1, is in good condition in Victoria General Hospital and the mother, 19, was released after treatment for minor injuries.

Colwood RCMP said Hansen lost control on a curve at Munns Road and Millstream and hit a utility pole. The car was demolished.

Big Plans Eyed for Downtown

A proposal for a major commercial development on the downtown block facing city hall has been submitted to the city for preliminary consideration, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The project is proposed for the large block bounded by Douglas, Cormorant, Blanshard and Pandora, most of which is now a blacktopped parking lot.

Pollen told reporters at his weekly press conference the proposal envisages a substantial complex including a motel, office accommodation, retail outlets and "a residential component which we very much need."

The development would conform with the city's downtown zoning requirements of a maximum height of 140 feet (14 storeys) and a floor-space-to-land ratio of three to one, he said.

The mayor said the developers, Speed Developments Ltd., had discussed the scheme for several months with aldermen responsible for planning and zoning, and "we have done everything we can to assist and encourage them in the initial stages."

The firm has now reached the stage of submittting plans for city scrutiny prior to an application for a building permit.

Further details of the proposed development were not available today, but it is understood plans call for a tower structure atop a podium.

Due to established development along the Douglas section of the block, including two bank buildings, there would be no frontage on that street.

Pollen said the city had given consideration last year to the idea of acquiring the property as a possible site for a convention centre, but at that time there was no special fund for acquiring strategic parcels of land.

CAYER BILLED FOR TRIP

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says Marc Cayer, a prisoner of the North Vietnamese for five years, has been billed $1,275 by the federal government which returned him to Canada from Hanoi earlier this year.

The newspaper says a copy of the bill, sent to Mr. Cayer by the external affairs department, has been made available to it.

Items for which the 30-year agronomist from St. Raymond, Que., is being charged The Star says, include air travel, cost of meals in Hanoi and Saigon, $32.54 for the suit, tie and socks given him to replace his prison clothes.

The Star says a letter was sent Mr. Cayer on May 1 asking him to settle the April 5 bill as soon as possible so department accounts could be made up to date.

Mitchell Sharp, external affairs minister, told the Commons Feb. 12 that Mr. Cayer's travel expenses would be covered by the government. The same arrangement would apply for Lloyd Oppel, a 21-year-old missionary from Courtenay, B.C., also a prisoner of the North Vietnamese.

Oppel was taken to the United States in a U.S. aircraft and then transported home by a Canadian Armed Forces aircraft. The Star quotes Oppel in an interview Tuesday as saying he has received no bill from the Canadian government.

Cayer flew from Hanoi to Saigon aboard an International Commission of Control and Supervision aircraft and from Saigon to Chicago on commercial flights. He travelled from Chicago to Quebec City in a federal government jet.

U.K. Cabinet Sex Scandal

Times News Services

Britain's Prime Minister Edward Heath has called an emergency meeting of his top advisers to investigate reports of a vice scandal in his cabinet.

Scotland Yard is pressing a full investigation and informed sources said MI-5, the government counter-espionage agency, has been ordered to check whether national security has been compromised through brothel assignations following the resignation of a junior minister in Heath's cabinet Tuesday.

It is exactly 10 years since the Profumo sex scandal shook the British government.

Junior cabinet minister Lord Lambton, who was under-secretary of defence for the RAF, today admitted to "a casual acquaintance with a call girl" but denied newspaper reports that national security is imperilled by the involvement of high-ranking officials in an international vice ring.

"There has been no high-life vice ring, no security leak, no blackmail; and so far as I know, no politician from any party is remotely concerned with these events."

Within hours the office of Attorney General Sir Peter Rawlinson announced that summonses alleging illegal possession of dangerous drugs have been issued against Lambton. It said he is being charged with possession of marijuana and amphetamines.

The Evening Standard of London said special agents for three weeks have been investigating sensational allegations "about vice ring improprieties involving government ministers and other figures." It said at least one other government minister was involved.

ADMITS 'STUPIDITY'

The London Evening News said the girl was a black call girl named "Betty" and that a man calling himself her husband tried to sell "incriminating photographs" of the girl and Lambton to a British newspaper for $25,000.

The Daily Mirror says one source close to the top level of the government told it that Scotland Yard's file on the matter was "dynamite."

"I behaved with credulous stupidity," said Lambton, 50-year-old father of a son and five daughters, in a press statement.

"This is the sordid story," he said. "All that happened is that some sneak pimp has seen an opportunity of making money by the sale of the story and secret photographs to papers at home and abroad."

He said he has been told the husband of the call girl with whom he was acquainted secretly took some photographs and sold them to newspapers.

Another Conservative government was rocked 10 years ago by the disclosure that its war minister, John Profumo, and a Soviet military attache had slept with the same prostitute, Christine Keeler. No security leak was ever found, but Profumo's political career collapsed in disgrace because he lied to the House of Commons about his connection with Miss Keeler.

The government refused comment on the reports of the new scandal, but the allegations were splashed on front pages of newspapers.

HENDERSON HINTS SUBTERFUGE

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Some federal government departments are trying to circumvent the Commons in gaining funds, the latest report of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson hinted today.

The report, tabled in the Commons this afternoon, slams "circuitous" sales of CF-5 aircraft worth more than $34 million and suggests the purpose behind the sales to foreign governments was to buy new planes without Parliamentary approval of the necessary funds.

Henderson's report also points out that over-payments totalling $1,044,000 were made in old-age pensions last year and only little more than half of it has been recovered by the government.

It also shows:

—The CBC will have to absorb losses of $4,872,000 to March 31 last year unless that amount is offset by subsequent profits.

—The national defence department was reimbursed about $8.3 million for meals and rations to its members but issued another $8.8 million worth, an increase of $1 million over 1970-71.

This report, for the fiscal year ending March 31, is Henderson's last. He retired early in April.

Freeze For Prison

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said today no medium-security prisoners will be sent to William Head penitentiary until he has considered a petition from area residents. (See also Page 13)

Replying to a question from Allan McKinnon (Conservative-Victoria) in the Commons, Allmand said he would go ahead with plans to raise the prison's fence but promised to delay other action until he had heard suggestions for relocation of the prison from Metchosin and Albert Head residents.

"It looks as if there will be a freeze on the conversion," McKinnon told The Times today.

"He (Allmand) really has a devil of a problem," McKinnon said, "he hasn't a single empty cell in Canada."

McKinnon said that Allmand has expressed interest in the suggestion by Metchosin residents that William Head be moved to Bentinck Island, just inside of Race Rocks.

Barrett Links Job, Pay Guarantees

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Premier Barrett today proposed development of a "dual strategy of guaranteed jobs and guaranteed incomes."

Barrett, in an opening statement prepared for the premiers' conference proposed a permanent community employment program, tied to a guaranteed income program, higher family allowances and higher pensions.

"We are deeply concerned about the problems we perceive in the present social security system, and believe there is an urgent need to develop effective solutions to these problems."

His proposed community employment program would provide jobs "based on the notion of socially profitable employment in the public sector."

"The government of British Columbia is convinced that we should work toward replacing the present system of social assistance with a guaranteed income plan providing universal access for those persons who lack sufficient resources for a reasonable standard of living."

Barrett proposed sweeping changes in the Canada Pension Plan "so that it will play a central role in Canada's social security system."

Over a three-year period the level of maximum pensionable earnings should be increased "close to $10,000," and the present two-per-cent limit should be removed so pensions can move freely with the consumer price index.

Full retirement benefits should be available at age 60 instead of 65, with a reduced pension available at 55.

COFFEE BREAK ROBBERY

CHAPAIS, Que. (CP) — Three armed and masked bandits escaped with $136,000 in cash today after holding up a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in this community, 310 miles north of Montreal.

No shots were fired and no one was injured.

Police said the bank manager and four employees were in a restaurant about 15 minutes before the bank was scheduled to open, when the men, armed with revolvers and machine guns, burst in and took a teller hostage.

One man remained in the restaurant with the teller while the other two herded the manager and three bank employees off to open the bank.

$1,000,000 On the Road

PEARISBURG, Va. (AP) — A bus collided with an armored truck during a heavy rainstorm near here today, killing the driver of the truck and strewing about $1 million over the highway, police said.

Williams Cracks At Davis

Resources Minister Bob Williams reacted angrily today to a statement by federal Environment Minister Jack Davis that newsprint and pulp mills owned by the provincial government are among the worst polluters in the province. (See Page 27)

Williams attacked the federal minister for "not having the guts" to deal with the real pollution offenders in B.C., which he said are the multinational corporations based in the U.S.

The worst polluter in B.C., Williams said, is the Rayonier plant at Port Alice, owned by the giant American ITT Corporation.

Williams also said the provincial government had to go it alone in moving to support the economy of the northwestern sector of the province through its purchase of Columbia Cellulose operations in Prince Rupert and the Crown Zellerbach plant at Ocean Falls.

Similar projects in other provinces have been financed by the federal government through the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, Williams said, adding that B.C. was not able to get any money whatsoever from DREE for its takeovers.

Instead, Williams said, Davis has exhibited "political gamesmanship" in his comments about the B.C. mills.

"He's always trying to get a few 'Brownie' points in a penny-ante political game instead of attempting to cooperate with the provincial government," Williams said.

Close Camps, Parks Urged

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Pressure is being exerted on the provincial parks department to close down its campsites because of rowdyism and vandalism, parks director Robert Ahrens said today.

"People have requested that we turn over our campsite system to private operators," he said.

I'm against this because it would be a hell of a thing to do—leasing out our campsites to private individuals."

Ahrens said turning over provincial campsites to individuals or companies would be giving "private enterprise a foothold in our parks."

He was commenting on the disturbance in Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach on the Victoria Day weekend and the vandalism in provincial parks during Easter.

He said cost to repair damage caused by vandals in three parks—Goldstream, Bamberton and Mowat Parks—over Easter was $7,000.

"That is only for three parks," he said. "I haven't got the bills for damages to other parks on the island and the mainland."

He said he had a request Tuesday to phase out the campsite at Mowat Park near Ganges on Saltspring Island, and to turn it into a day park.

"I agree with that," he said. "It should be a day park for the local residents."

He said other people have requested we put fences around our campsites to keep out undesirable elements.

"I am opposed to this," he said. "The only answer to vandalism and hooliganism is to impose more stringent park restrictions. This means that a park warden would have the authority to refuse any person whom he thought is undesirable.

"It is not a thing we like to do," he added, "but legitimate campers have to be protected from hooligans."

Ahrens said the trouble in parks is caused by minority groups.

For the most part they are unmotivated young men," he said. "They don't know what to in their spare time, except drive cars, drink and draw attention to themselves."

John Willow, a member of the B.C. Sierra Club conservation committee, said the general public is partly to blame for increased vandalism.

"We are inclined to treat the teaching of recreational skills as a frill," he said. "In Britain and other European countries, recreational skills are considered as important as education."

"The problem of vandalism isn't going to get any better until we take a hard look at our educational system," he added. "There is a lot of educational work to be done in teaching people how to treat

Westcoast Wants Gas Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. is applying to the National Energy Board for an increase in the domestic rate charged to natural gas utilities in British Columbia.

Kelly Gibson, chairman of the Westcoast board, said at a news conference today that an increase in the rate base and rate of return was needed to meet increased cost of natural gas from the producers and recent tax legislation introduced by the B.C. government.

Gibson said the application represents the first domestic price increase sought by the company in its 16-year history.

"Westcoast has maintained prices at stable and moderate levels for 16 years," he said. "The provincial government is making it impossible to do so any longer.

"The only course open to us is to seek compensation for increased costs over which we have no control."

Gibson said the company was hit recently with a rise of eight cents per thousand cubic feet in the price of gas purchased from the Fort St. John fields.

He said this meant an increase of more than 25 per cent in the average field price paid by Westcoast and added $13 million a year to the cost of the company's gas supply.

KUWAIT PLACES BIG ARMS ORDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The tiny shiekdom of Kuwait is about to order more than $500 million worth of U.S. tanks, planes, missiles and military construction assistance as the arms race in the oil-rich Persian Gulf continues to expand.

Final arrangements between U.S. and Kuwaiti officials on the arms deal are expected to be made within the next few days.

The sale comes on the heels of about $2.5 billion in U.S. arms sales to Iran over the past 18 months; a $625 million British deal to help Saudi Arabia maintain its air defences; and continuing Soviet shipments of arms to Iraq, which has been feuding with both Kuwait and Iran.

'Doing Something for President'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — An ex-White House staffer testified today he felt he was "doing something for the president" when he relayed offers of executive clemency to Watergate conspirator James McCord and that he believed President Nixon knew he was making such offers.

Nixon, meanwhile, disclosed for the first time Tuesday he had ordered his two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, to limit the Watergate investigation.

He said he did it to protect highly sensitive "national security operations" being conducted by the CIA and the White House and not to impede bringing wrong-doers to justice. He denied making, or authorizing anybody to make, clemency offers.

But he conceded that some of his aides probably went beyond his directives and attempted to hide illegal activities which they and others had undertaken on his behalf.

John Caulfield, testifying for a second day at the Senate Watergate hearings, said he knew his actions were wrong but that his "loyalty to the President of the United States overrode these considerations."

Caulfield emphasized that he had "no direct knowledge" that Nixon was aware he relayed offers of clemency to McCord at three meetings last January while McCord was on trial for the bugging of Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Caulfield said he had been asked to relay the clemency promises to his old friend McCord by then-White House counsel John Dean, who he said told him to tell McCord the offers were sincere and came from "the highest levels" of the White House.

Caulfield said he believed Dean was acting with proper authority — which could only come fron Nixon himself.

The former White House aide said Dean's request plunged him into a deep personal conflict between loyalty to the White House and having to do what he knew was wrong — a criminal act to obstruct justice.

"I know when wrongdoing is occurring," he said. "I knew that (using) executive clemency in this manner was wrong."

Caulfield said that because Dean was involved in the clemency offers, he "assumed there were others in the White House" involved as well, including "conceivably, very conceivably, quite possibly" presidential adviser Ehrlichman.

He said he called Ehrlichman on June 17 — the day McCord and four other men were arrested at the Watergate — after being alerted to the arrests by the secret service, and told him: "John, there sounds like there is a disaster of some type."

He said Ehrlichman told him: "I guess I had better place a call to John Mitchell," the former attorney-general who has Nixon's campaign manager at the time.

McCord has testified he was told Mitchell helped to plan the Watergate bugging. Mitchell has denied the allegations, but has told a grand jury he sat in on three meetings where bugging plans were discussed.

Nixon, declaring he will not resign, issued two statements Tuesday disclaiming any knowledge of, or participation in, illegal activities.

While conceding he is under heavy fire; Nixon said: "I will not abandon my responsibilities. I will continue to do the job I was elected to do."

'She Came at Me With Knife': Jo Ann

"The next thing I knew, she was coming at me with a rolling pin and a knife. The knife went into my hand."

Displaying the scarred hand, 17-year-old Jo Ann Anderson, charged with the non-capital murder of her mother, Shirley, 38, told a Supreme Court jury Tuesday what she remembered the night of her mother's death.

The girl testified she suffered a memory lapse after the attack.

Mrs. Anderson arrived home shortly after 5 p.m., said Jo Anne. "She went out and came back in . . ."

She told the jury she caught only a "glimpse" of her mother before she went out again.

"She came in and said to me 'I put some money in your coat and my credit card so that you can go out tonight and you can have the car and you can get some new clothes.'

"So I said that was fine. She went out and came back in and I believe she had gone to the car, I don't know, to get whatever she got for supper, and she came in and told me to get out and stay out and not to come back.

"And I asked her why, this is my home, this is my home just as much as it's your home, and the only reason why we can stay here is as long as I stay with you, and I haven't done anything.

"The next thing I knew she was coming at me with a rolling pin and a knife, the knife went into my hand . . . The next thing I remember was the car stalling at Cloverdale and Douglas and driving to the police station."

"Did she ever tell you to get out and stay out before?" asked Prosecutor George MacMinn.

The girl replied her mother had asked her to leave on other occasions after an argument but would always apologize moments later.

"Did you ever discuss with your mother the possibility of you being pregnant?" asked MacMinn.

"No," replied Jo Ann.

"You did not say to your mother, on one occasion, that you suspect you might be pregnant but weren't sure?"

"No."

"Jo Ann, have you ever taken drugs?"

"I tried marijuana once."

"Have you ever tried acid?"

"No."

Earlier in the week Jo Ann and a friend, Lori Drage, had made arrangements to go to the Empress Hotel Paint Cellar Friday night.

Before the stabbing Mrs. Anderson gave her daughter the money and keys to her car to go out for the evening.

Jo Ann testified she did not have a driver's licence but had used the car occasionally to run errands.

"Were you a little surprised that your mother offered you the car that night?" asked MacMinn.

"Not really, because she'd let me use it before," she said.

She said it was unusual, however, that her mother had offered the car for the entire evening.

Lori of 1125 Hillside, testified Mrs. Anderson telephoned her during the week of the stabbing and said, "Would you please promise me that you won't come back until five o'clock next Saturday morning."

Lori told the jury she had been to the Anderson's for occasional meals or coffee and had never heard Mrs. Anderson speak unkindly to Jo Ann.

"Did you ever witness any fights or arguments between Jo Ann and her mother?" asked MacMinn.

She told the court she'd seen one argument over who was going to cook dinner.

Did Mrs. Anderson, to your knowledge, have any boy friends?" asked MacMinn.

"No."

"Would you agree that Mrs. Anderson was a good mother to Jo Ann?"

"Yes, she was."

Assisting MacMinn is Ted Pollard. Defence counsel are Michael Hutchison and Cecil Branson.

Caught in the Middle —The Witness Dilemma

One of the most interesting aspects of the Watergate hearings so far, to me, has been the performances of the witnesses—not so much in what they've had to say, but in the witness role.

In any such hearing or in any court of law the witness is precisely that in the most elementary theatrical sense: a player on a stage. In some eight years of covering courts it was the thing that fascinated me most. You might meet some nondescript guy out in the hall before the court was called into session only to find him, an hour later, in the box, giving a passable imitation of Alfred Dreyfus. Yet the most articulate of men often seize up in that unaccustomed part and make burbling sounds that could only come from a village idiot.

Unless they are professionals of some sort the witness has nothing in his background or even in his preparation for the event to cause him to perform predictably. More often than not he has never in his life before been such a focal point of attention, yet here he is in the most dramatic position imaginable, actually raised up physically on a kind of platform, every eye and ear — the judge above, the lawyers and spectators below — turned in undivided attention upon him. Small wonder that so many witnesses babble.

I learned in those years of covering the courts that lawyers, however much they may rehearse their clients before their appearance, invariably stress that the worst thing a witness can do is to lie.

It is particularly evident in the Watergate hearings because, of course, the television lens zooms in on the witness and records every tell-tale flick of the eye or pursing of the lips. But it is equally true in a courtroom that a man or woman who twists the truth, or tells something less than it, stands all but nakedly revealed.

It always seemed to me the very essence of incorruptible justice that, though most of us go through our lives as unmitigated social liars, even the mildest fib in a courtroom causes a huge neon sign to balloon above the head of the witness, blinking on the word "Liar!"

The lawyers may not be entirely altruistic in this regard for the truth since they know that there's an adversary there just dying to pounce on the slightest evasion of any salient fact, thus to discredit the whole of the witness' testimony.

In my time as a court reporter I saw many an instance when a witness had told some little white lie, often with no real bearing on the case, that gave a smart lawyer the dry kindling to burn down the entirety of his evidence.

Judges, too, are notorious in cherishing the truth and nothing but the truth, which the witness has solemnly sworn, on an Old or New Testament, to tell, and do not take kindly to anything less.

It is, of course, the adversary system that causes the already bewildered witness to be lead into total bewilderment. In case after case I have seen witnesses who were examined, first, by a sympathetic lawyer, who visibly relaxed and grew in stature, thus leaving them entirely unprepared for the cross-examination by a hostile and frequently terrible-tempered legal beagle who tore off their limbs one by one.

In no other arena of life may a man experience such ego-building and such ego-destruction within a single day and the segue from expansive righteousness to injured and beleaguered innocence is one of life's most awkward transitions.

Even after those years of it as a spectator I never managed to accept the unpleasant tension that is the result of any litigation.

To those who work in the courtroom atmosphere every day it is simply a routine with certain well-defined rules, but the layman is always conscious that men or women are being made to appear incompetent or obtuse or prejudiced or just plain rotten in the interests of arriving at a supportive verdict. It is all very polite, very restrained, very much in control, but blows are being struck and though justice may prevail, as it most often does, it inflicts deep hurts.

The witness, often the innocent in the middle, feels that very directly since he is so painfully aware of the fact that he has little or no control over the conflict, though he is momentarily at the heart of it. In the Watergate hearings, no less than in a local courtroom, the witness takes on the appearance of a live, impaled moth, a horrible sight to see.

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

This boy keeps beating up his younger brother. That girl keeps wetting her bed. This boy can handle his school work easily but won't without constant attention. That girl throws wild temper tantrums when she's teased.

Problems most parents know something about. But problems in these cases which have blossomed into nightmares. These kids are driving their families frantic. In the process they've become tangled in emotional knots.

On the top floor of the Eric Martin Institute, in bright rooms where kids can run and play and work and shout, a new program to put these children and their parents back on the track is showing promising results.

The children's unit, with room for 10 youngsters from infancy to age 15, opened last December, only the second of its kind in B.C.

Clinical director is Dr. Philip Ney, a child psychiatrist. He is full of praise for what he describes as a "bright" young staff, led by head nurse Mrs. Mavis Martin. It includes besides nurses and orderlies, social workers, a psychologist, occupational therapist and a teacher.

The natural ties which bind most parents and children sometimes snap and, reasons aside for the moment, the behavior patterns such children develop—from withdrawl to hyperactivity—can generate a family climate which drives everyone 'round the bend.

Some kids want to scrap continually, some wet beds or soil themselves, some can't keep still, some turn inward, some smash things, some are seasoned liars, some can't stop playing hookey.

Most have big troubles in school—with other kids or teachers or work. One has been suspened from kindergarten.

Boys outnumber girls in the children's unit, about three-to-one. Many of the children come from homes with just one parent. A substantial number, about 12 per cent, of the trouble children are adopted.

They come to live on the sixth floor at EMI for five weeks and most end up reluctant to leave.

The children's unit isn't a place for miracle cures but for turning around family situations which are rolling towards disaster so that—with little pushes from staff and family—they are rolling the other way.

When it works, parents deserve most of the credit, the staff says. It was parents who cared enough to give the unit a try, and inevitably, parents along with children have to overhaul their views.

The staff conceeds they are not likely to see some of the most disturbed children in the community because their parents don't care. But some have come from up-Island, the lower mainland and the interior.

The sixth floor doesn't look or function in the traditional hospital image. No uniforms for one thing. And there are bedrooms rather than wards, two doubles, one for four (usually younger children) and two singles, with children's, not hospital beds, bright curtains and bathrooms alongside.

Down a hall there is a barren cupboard-like room with window in the door, the so-called "time out room" where a rampaging older child will occasionally be locked for a short spell to cool down.

Ney says the time-out room is used so rarely he can't recall the last time. It's a "last resort" measure, used only when a youngster attacks a staff member or tries to destroy the place.

In general, the children's unit is a place where you can blow your stack without it being held against you.

There is also a 15-passenger bus which takes everyone on frequent outings. Swimming and skating are regular activities as are trips to parks — Beacon Hill, McKenzie Bay, China Beach. The group just got back this week from camping at Goldstream where some of the parents joined in.

Thursdays at suppertime parents come along to a conference room, pour themselves a coffee, and Ney leads a lively discussion on what it's all about.

They look at guidelines which can reasonably be expected of their children, ways to meet and improve on them.

Should two brothers be allowed to fight at all? Not at all, says the mother involved. Other parents suggest that's not reasonable. Everyone is left with something to think about.

School Ultimatum To City

James Bay community school has received a one-month reprieve.

Greater Victoria School Board Tuesday night agreed to delay commencement of working drawings on the project until June 30, giving city council another month to decide whether they wish to join in on construction of facilities.

Last week a school board committee recommended the working drawings be started immediately without proposed community facilities, on the assumption the extra facilities could be added later if the city decided to join.

James Bay Community Association member Lorne De Girolamo appealed to the board, however, to delay the drawings and give the city a deadline.

The board agreed to notify the city "of the urgency concerning its possible participation" in the recreation facilities and to set the June 30 deadline.

MEETING SET UP

As a result of the decision, a meeting was set up this morning between representatives of the city, the board and the community association, to discuss the city's intentions.

The school board plans to build six extra classrooms, a library and activity room at James Bay Elementary in order to accommodate the transfer of all pupils from South Park School, which will be phased out in Sept., 1974.

The community association wishes to make the expanded school a community facility as well, with the addition of three multi-activity rooms, additional library and gym space, and a cafeteria costing $160,000.

The community group needs a commitment from the city to get the necessary funding for the project, and has received council support "in principle."

Before meeting this morning with some aldermen and members of the James Bay Community Association to discuss the porject, Mayor Peter Pollen said city council has discussed participation without reaching any firm conclusions.

He added, however; "Obviously the city can participate only to the extent of its financial ability, which is extremely limited.

"For the city to get into this activity to any significant degree would be beyond our current financial capacity."

Prison Debate Tonight

The drive of Metchosin and Albert Head residents to have William Head penitentiary moved is expected to come to a climax tonight at a mass meeting in Metchosin Community Hall.

The Metchosin Ratepayers' Association and the Albert Head Ratepayers' Association have banded together in an effort to get the prison, due to be upgraded from minimum to medium-security, closed down.

MRA chairman John Waterman said he expects representatives from all political parties to attend the 8 p.m. meeting.

A western region represenative of the federal penitentiary system will also be present.

Action to try to have the penitentiary removed was accelerated May 14 when three people were brutally attacked and hospitalized shortly after Lionel Ernest Blanchard, 32, escaped from the prison.

FIREARMS

He is to appear in Victoria provincial court Thurday on five charges which include robbery and violence, assault and causing grievous bodily harm.

Residents on Sandgate, where Colin Bowen was attacked, are planning to arm themselves to protect their families and have asked the RCMP Colwood for instruction.

The MRA and AHRA have asked Solicitor-General Warren Allmand to have the prison moved to Bentinck Island, site of a former leper colony, just inside Race Rocks.

Waterman said today he has been told that Bentinck was originally considered as a possible site for the prison.

"It was turned down," he said, "because the prison was to be temporary.

"William Head (the former quarantine station) already had the power and water at the standard they needed and it was considered too expensive to bring Bentinck's facilities up to the same standards.

"But they very nearly took Bentinck Island," he added.

Diphtheria Cases Up To 16 in Victoria

The number of people treated for diphtheria in Greater Victoria has risen to 16, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior public health officer, said today.

All have responded successfully to treatment in hospital, he added.

The four latest cases:

Two men, aged 23 and 25, whose symptoms were spotted in a doctor's office Friday.

Two girls, about age 8, who are classified as healthy carriers, meaning they are carrying the germ but not suffering from it. They were spotted in a recent survey in which 600 throat swabs were taken, said Whitbread.

The girls had previously been immunized and were not exhibiting any symptoms of the disease.

Whitbread had said earlier that public health staff were still looking for a healthy carrier responsible for the earlier local cases. But he said today it is very difficult to know whether the carriers have now been found.

Diphtheria immunization is given routinely at all baby clinics and through a program in elementary schools where parents give their permission.

But an outbreak on northern and western Vancouver Island earlier this year has led public health officials to urge parents to make certain their children have been immunized. The metro health board also makes booster shots available for adults at area clinics by appointment.

RECORD ENTRY ON HAND FOR SAILING CLASSICS

A record 249 boats will be pacing it out in the Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classics this weekend.

Deadline for registration was Tuesday and officials of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club expect to be working to midnight, computerising and preparing lists.

The Swiftsure gets under way 9:30 a.m. Saturday off Brotchie Ledge with a start line set between the navy's HMCS Porte de la Reine and the U.S. coast guard's Point Bennett.

The Juan de Fuca boats will get their start gun 15 minutes later.

Many of the large sailing armada are expected to tie up in the Inner Harbor Thursday, the remainder arriving in time for the Friday evening festivities.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen will welcome the visiting boats. This will be followed by the traditional roll call of boats.

TOT FIGHTS FOR LIFE AFTER JUGULAR CUT

Madeleine Hansen, daughter of Richard and Jean Hansen, 1077 Davie, suffered severe cuts to the jugular vein and head and internal injuries Monday after the three of them went through the windshield of a car in which they were riding.

The child's father, 18, is in good condition in Victoria General Hospital and the mother, 19, was released after treatment for minor injuries.

Colwood RCMP said Hansen lost control on a curve at Munns Road and Millstream and hit a utility pole. The car was demolished.

Big Plans Eyed for Downtown

A proposal for a major commercial development on the downtown block facing city hall has been submitted to the city for preliminary consideration, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The project is proposed for the large block bounded by Douglas, Cormorant, Blanshard and Pandora, most of which is now a blacktopped parking lot.

Pollen told reporters at his weekly press conference the proposal envisages a substantial complex including a motel, office accommodation, retail outlets and "a residential component which we very much need."

The development would conform with the city's downtown zoning requirements of a maximum height of 140 feet (14 storeys) and a floor-space-to-land ratio of three to one, he said.

The mayor said the developers, Speed Developments Ltd., had discussed the scheme for several months with aldermen responsible for planning and zoning, and "we have done everything we can to assist and encourage them in the initial stages."

The firm has now reached the stage of submittting plans for city scrutiny prior to an application for a building permit.

Further details of the proposed development were not available today, but it is understood plans call for a tower structure atop a podium.

Due to established development along the Douglas section of the block, including two bank buildings, there would be no frontage on that street.

Pollen said the city had given consideration last year to the idea of acquiring the property as a possible site for a convention centre, but at that time there was no special fund for acquiring strategic parcels of land.
